Quinn Plans Martial Law At 'Gansett

BULLETIN

Martial law may be declared to prevent the opening of Gansett race track on Monday, it was indicated today by Governor Robert E. Quinn following a conference with his Adjutant General Herbert R. Dean, head of the state militia.

By JAMES J. DELANEY
(Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent)

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 16—A "plan" to open the million-dollar 'Gansett Park on Monday—but not under the management of Walter E. O'Hara—has been decided upon by Governor Robert E. Quinn, it was revealed here today.

Following a conference with Attorney-General John P. Hartigan and other close members of his official family which ended at an early hour today, Governor Quinn announced:

"A plan has been reached. It will be announced later today."

Governor Quinn would make no further statement in explanation.

ROCK PLANS RACES

As the chief executive fought tooth and nail to keep O'Hara from opening the track, the Rhode Island racing mogul, elated over his Supreme Court victory which quashed the racing division's suspension of the fall meeting, went ahead with plans to begin racing Monday.

But adding to the confused situation, as far as horse racing on

Slippery Rock Girls Escape Scantily Clad; Fire Loss $400,000

SLIPPERY ROCK, Pa., Oct. 16 (AP)—One hundred and sixty-seven coeds escaped safely in scanty attire this morning from fire which swept historic North Hall on the campus of Slippery Rock College.

Nobody was injured. The office of President Charles Miller estimated the damage at approximately $400,000.

The fire originated in the kitchen where preparation were under way for an ox roast in connection with Homecoming Day, and the annual football game with Westminster College.

Hundreds of alumni and other visitors gathering for the game saw the building, a three-story frame and brick structure, collapse while flames enveloped it.

Slippery Rock was the highly publicized football team which lost to Boston University a week ago at Fenway Park. Its unusual name brought it a tremendous amount of attention in football circles before the game.

U. S. Accepts Bid To Peace Parley

Washington, Oct. 16 (AP)—The United States formally accepted today an invitation to participate in the nine-power treaty conference over the Far Eastern crisis at Brussels on October 30 and designated Norman H. Davis to head this government's delegation.

Secretary Hull said the delegation probably would sail the middle of next week.

Other members of the American group will be:

Dr. Stanley Hornbeck, special political advisor to the Secretary of State on Far Eastern affairs.

J. Pierrepont Moffet, chief of the State Department's European division.

Robert T. Pell, an attache of the European division, and Charles E. Bohlen, also attached to the European division.

The general expectation was that the delegation will sail from New York on the United States liner Washington next Wednesday.

Grand Jury Indicts Dolan

EXTRA

Edmund L. Dolan, ex-city treasurer, was indicted today by the Suffolk county grand jury, his counsel was notified by District Attorney Foley's office.

A secret indictment was returned today by the Suffolk county grand jury hearing evidence in the case of former City Treasurer Edmund L. Dolan.

The grand jury action came after one more witness, Harold Simpson of Coolidge street, Brookline, alleged to be former treasurer of Dolan's Legal Securities Corporation, testified.

Following the return of the indictment to Judge Harold P. Williams of superior court, the Grand Jury adjourned until Monday morning when more evidence in the Dolan case will be heard.

By order of the court, Dolan is liable to the city for approximately $175,000 alleged to have been made through illegal bond transactions.

WARRANT ISSUED

The finding of the court upheld the city's charge that Dolan used the Legal Securities Corporation, his own company, as a means of "fraudulently" making large secret profits.

After the return of the indictment, a warrant for the arrest of the person named was handed to Sergeant Maurice Sullivan and Inspector Martin J. Conroy of the district attorney's office by Assistant District Attorney Frederick T. Doyle who is in charge of the case.

CONFERS WITH JUDGE

First indication that an indictment would be returned came when Doyle went to the judges' lobby and asked Judge Williams to wait until the grand jury session was over.

Meanwhile, Corporation Counsel Henry E. Foley said he does not intend to proceed as yet against the bonding companies which covered Dolan during his years in office under former Mayor Curley.

CIO Renews Peace Bid To AFL

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 16 (AP)—The CIO again asked the A. F. of L. today to send representatives to a peace conference in Washington Oct. 25 "with or without commitments."

Philip Murray, chairman of a special committee named to arrange the meeting and confer with federation representatives, sent this telegram today to Frank Morrison, secretary-treasurer of the federation at Denver:

"Our committee will meet your committee (Willard Hotel) Washington, October 25, with or without commitments as you prefer.

"If you decide to cease quibbling and attend conference advise me Pittsburgh."

John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, declined to comment on this latest move in maneuvering which many labor leaders hoped would lead to a united labor movement.

The decision of Lewis and his leaders came today after they had studied for several hours a telegram late last night from the Federation executive council meeting at Denver.

Although none attempted to interpret the telegram, it appeared to most observers that the CIO had decided to recede from its announced principles and to reach a settlement on its own terms.

Doctor, Wife Strangled, Taken on 450-Mile Ride

A high school boy's ghastly, 450-mile odyssey of murder ended today at North Arlington, N. J., near Newark, where the battered bodies of an elderly Maine physician and his wife were found in a parked automobile. The boy, found sleeping in the car with his dead passengers, coolly admitted the crime, police said, and traced the entire course of his ghoulish road tour.

'I Confess —'

NORTH ARLINGTON, N. J., Oct. 16 (INS)—The full text of 18-year-old Paul N. Dwyer's confession, as released by Police Chief George Shippee, follows:

At 8 p. m. Wednesday night there wasn't anybody home and I called the doctor to treat me.

He and I were in the bathroom of my house. He told me that a girl I was going around with was an expectant mother.

I hit him in the face with my fist and he fell and struck his head on the bathtub. I could not quite knock him out.

I went downstairs and packed some things. When I went upstairs again the doctor was coming to.

So I put a belt around his neck and choked him and then I hit him on the head with a hammer.

I though of a getaway and decided to take him with me.

I brought his car up from in front of his house (the two families lived within a few houses of each other) and around through the side to my house. I carried his body downstairs.

I put the body in the trunk carrier in the rear of the car.

I drove around for about an hour and then thought I would

The murdered couple were Dr. James G. Littlefield, 65, and his wife, Lydia, 64, of South Paris, Me.

The physician had been bludgeoned and strangled. His body had been jammed into a trunk at the rear of the car.

Mrs. Littlefield's body lay on the floor, under a rug. She also had been strangled.

The youth, taken into custody, said he was Paul Dwyer, 18, South Paris neighbor of the Littlefields.

Sheriff Fernando Francis said at South Paris that several persons had seen Dwyer and his two "passengers." It is believed he passed through Boston in this fantastic fashion.

"REMARK" BLAMED

According to Dwyer's reputed confession, Dr. Littlefield was slain in the boy's home after he had made a remark "about my girl friend."

Mrs. Littlefield was callously murdered Friday morning on the highway between Portland and South Paris when she accused Dwyer of murdering her husband, according to the boy's story.

Police quoted Dwyer as saying that between Wednesday and Friday, while riding with Mrs. Littlefield with her husband's body in the trunk, he passed through Boston.

FOUND SLEEPING IN CAR

The shocking discovery of the double crime came after two North Arlington policemen had found Dwyer sleeping in the doctor's car in a dark lot bordering the highway which separates North Arlington from Lyndhurst.

Dwyer had $107 in his possession

Kennedy Says Roosevelt Likely to Balance Budget

Believes Tax System Can Be Adjusted For More Revenue

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Oct. 16 (INS)—President Roosevelt has "a very, very good chance" to balance the budget, Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the maritime commission, declared after a visit to Hyde Park.

Kennedy declared the President is set on bringing the government out of the "red."

The maritime chairman personally expressed opposition to the capital gains, and undistributed profits taxes as now levied. He said it was his firm conviction both could be adjusted downward and bring the Treasury in more revenue than it now gets from those sources.

DISCUSS SHIP SURVEY

In addition to budget-balancing, Kennedy said he and the President discussed a survey the maritime commission is now making to establish a long range policy for the American merchant marine.

Definite recommendations regarding future subsidy probably will be ready for presentation to the special session of Congress, which meets next month, he said.

Maritime labor problems also were taken up with Mr. Roosevelt. Kennedy lately took a strong position against CIO ship strikers, branding one group "mutineers" and proposing they be put in irons.

HITS ALDRICH ON STOCKS

The report to Congress may contain some observations on the labor matter, Kennedy said, although not necessarily any recommendations for legal steps.

Because of his experience as a financier, Kennedy was queried about the current stock market slump. He conceded that losses now being sustained probably would result in smaller revenue from taxes than the Treasury originally had anticipated, but still insisted Mr. Roosevelt's prospects of balancing the budget were bright.

Kennedy took sharp exception to the statement of Winthrop Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National Bank, that present margin requirements are unreasonable.

JOSEPH P. KENNEDY REAR ADMIRAL E. S. LAND

Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the maritime commission and former SEC head, shown at left with Rear Admiral E. S. Land in recent picture, is convinced after interview with the President that Roosevelt has a "very good chance of balancing the budget." Kennedy also commented on the need of tax revision to get more income for the Treasury.

Kills 2, Drives With Bodies

when the police took him to headquarters for questioning.

While Chief George Seeley was conducting a routine interrogation, Patrolman Norman Turner returned to the lot to examine the car.

The officer rushed back a few minutes later to report he had found a woman's body on the rear floor of the car.

Dwyer, according to the chief, calmly suggested the officer be sent back to look into the trunk.

POLICE TAKE STATEMENT

When the doctor's body was found, county authorities were notified and poured in the investigation. After sharply questioning the boy, police made public a statement reputedly taken from him.

In this account, Dwyer is alleged to have said he struck the doctor when the latter, calling at his home to examine him, said he was keeping company with a girl about to become a mother.

Dwyer, according to the police, said that he struck the doctor with his fist and then ran downstairs for a hammer.

He is alleged to have admitted clubbing Dr. Littlefield several times before strangling him with a belt to "make sure he was dead."

GOES AFTER WIFE

Then, according to the reputed confession, he drove the doctor's car to the Littlefield home and told Mrs. Littlefield her husband had struck two people and had fled to Boston.

Police report him as saying he told Mrs. Littlefield to get what money she could and drive to Boston with him.

He said the body of the doctor was in the trunk when he and Mrs. Littlefield left South Paris for Boston. The doctor's wife had $296, he said.

THROUGH 3 N. E. STATES

They drove to Boston, Concord, N. H., and Portland, he told police, and were on the way back to South Paris when Mrs. Littlefield accused him of murdering her husband.

The doctor was murdered Wednesday, he admitted, and it was Friday when Mrs. Littlefield "yelled" her accusation.

Calmly, police say, he told of driving to New York, passing through the Holland Tunnel late last night, and deciding to sleep in the parking lot which became journey's end.

Dwyer had hardly completed his statement, authorities revealed, when he began to babble:

"I haven't any girl. I don't like girls."

Faced with the prospect of a double murder trial in Maine, he mumbled:

"I guess it doesn't make any difference."

MAINE AUTHORITIES ACT

Meanwhile, Maine authorities were moving for a swift return and prosecution of the boy.

Early today, Cumberland County Prosecutor George Smith and Sheriff Francis sped into South Paris and visited the homes of Dwyer and his alleged victims.

With them were State Police Chief William Towle and two troopers.

Francis later left for Boston, where he was to board a plane for New Jersey early this afternoon.

TEXT OF CONFESSION

go to the doctor's house. I told Mrs. Littlefield that the doctor had struck two people and had supposedly killed them.

He lost his head, I told her, and has gone to Lewiston to take a train for Boston. He told us to meet him there.

She got dressed and came out to the car. We drove from South Paris into Boston and I went into a telephone booth and made a fake telephone call. She stayed in the car.

I came out and told her that the doctor had gone to Concord, N. H., so we went to Concord and we loaded the car with gas outside of Boston.

I had a road map and found the right road to Concord. We stopped at the Eagle Hotel in Concord. We registered as Philip Davis and Mrs. Lydia Littlefield.

I put the car in back of the hotel. The doctor's body was still in the trunk.

We waited there till late Thursday for the doctor to arrive. Of course he didn't.

Mrs. Littlefield paid all the expenses.

We drove back and forth to the railroad station all day. Then we took a ride to Manchester, N. H., to kill time.

Then we came back to Concord.

At 8 p. m. Thursday we left and started to go back towards Boston. We stopped in a restaurant but did not eat.

We went to Portland, going by way of Newburyport and Portsmouth. I decided to take Mrs. Littlefield back to her home and take the doctor's body to Oxford county court house in South Paris and confess.

On the way back I stopped because my eyes were hurting. While we were parked, we talked about the doctor.

I was so tired. I had had no sleep since Tuesday. She questioned me and I guess I could not give her very sensible answers.

And then she asked me outright:

"What have you done with the doctor?"

I tried to stall her off and was just going to tell her about the doctor when she screamed:

"You killed the doctor!"

She said she knew I had done it, and was going up the road to straighten that out.

We started to argue and I tried to talk her out of it. She tried to get out of the car to go for help and I wouldn't let her.

And she was in the front seat with me and she began to fight with me and try to blow the horn. It was about 6 a. m. on Friday and just getting daylight.

I grabbed her by the throat and held on.

I did not hit her.

I just held her by the throat until she was killed.

I threw her into the back and covered her with blankets and suitcases.

Her pocketbook was on the front seat.

I opened it and saw about $250.

I figured, "This is enough to give me a good start."

I left there about 7:30 a. m. and drove back to Boston and was in Boston about Friday noon. Then I drove on the outskirts of all the towns until I arrived in New York between 7 and 8 last night.

I came across the Holland Tunnel and drove through it and parked in a vacant lot where I thought I would rest.

That's where the police found me.

At Hebron, Me., Mrs. Jessie Dwyer, mother of the captured youth, hysterically refused to believe her son was capable of murder.

Mrs. Dwyer, a nurse at the Hebron sanitarium, cried:

"I don't believe it. It can't be true. The police have said nothing to me.

"I can't say anything at this time about my son. I can't believe anything like that about him."

Then, sobbing bitterly, she hung up the phone.

Dr. Littlefield was born in South Paris in 1873 and had practiced there for 40 years.

He was graduated from Bowdoin Medical school in 1897 and was licensed the same year. He was a fellow of the American Medical Association.

Accused Maine Killer Is Son Of Nurse

Sheriff and Prosecutor Off for Jersey to Return Dwyer

SOUTH PARIS, Me., Oct. 16 (INS)—Sheriff F. F. Francis and County Attorney Robert T. Smith of Oxford County started on a quick trip by motor and airplane for New Jersey today to return for trial Paul Dwyer, 18-year-old Paris Hill youth, accused of slaying Dr. and Mrs. J. G. Littlefield, residents of this town for 35 years.

Dwyer, son of a practical nurse long connected with Hebron Academy, had been highly respected here and had no police record. He had several friends among the girls of this town and the Paris Hill district.

The sheriff and county attorney were told over long distance telephone that young Dwyer would waive extradition. He will be returned by airplane and lodged in Oxford County jail pending trial, probably November 2, before Judge George L. Emery in superior court.

MOTHER DOCTOR'S NURSE

The mother of the youth accused of killing the aged couple and driving with the bodies over New England, was prostrated today.

She had resided with her son in a little cottage on Paris Hill. Her husband was divorced several years ago, disappeared and was thought to have died.

After serving as nurse at Hebron Academy for many years Mrs. Dwyer retired to her home and has been on call duty for Dr. Littlefield and other physicians of the district.

Her son, during the past two years, has worked as chauffeur for summer residents and Dr. Littlefield. He had always been known as sane and normal and had never been in trouble.

Dr. Littlefield and his wife were highly respected residents of South Paris. The doctor has been practising medicine here for at least 40 years.

DOCTOR ALWAYS ON JOB

He was the old-fashioned country doctor type and gave long hours and every effort at his command to his patients. No storm was too severe for him to answer a call. In the old days by horse and sleigh he often fought his way at midnight through snow drifts in a howling blizzard to reach the bedside of a stricken person. The task was not so hard with the coming of the automobile.

Residents of Paris Hill, three miles outside South Paris, said Dwyer was of slight build and mild mannered.

If convicted of first-degree murder, Dwyer would face a sentence of life imprisonment. There is no capital punishment in Maine.

The whole community was shocked by the tragic news from New Jersey.

SEEN ON THURSDAY

Dr. Littlefield and Dwyer had not been seen in town for several days, but several neighbors told Sheriff Francis they saw Mrs. Littlefield on the street near her home on Thursday.

Telephone calls to the office of the doctor in his home were unanswered but it was thought by his patients that the aged physician and his wife were taking an autumn vacation to enjoy the foliage.

The sheriff and county attorney interviewed the mother of young Dwyer, looked over the house and talked with his neighbors and associates before starting for Portland by automobile. At Portland they will take an airplane to New York via Boston. They planned, they said, to return young Dwyer by the same route.

Tobin's Father Charges Name Was Forged

Signature on Manser Papers Is Called Fraudulent

Topping a week of sensational developments, charges that the forged name of James Tobin, father of Mayoralty Candidate Maurice J. Tobin, appeared on the nomination papers of a rival aspirant today were tossed in the lap of the Boston election commission.

The allegations were made by former City Assessor Timothy W. Murphy of Jamaica Plain, who declared the name was fraudulently placed on the papers of Charles L. Manser, Republican candidate.

Murphy produced photostatic copies showing the name of a James Tobin of 107 Calumet street, Roxbury, the address of the school committeeman's father.

TOBIN DENIES SIGNATURE

Informed of the purported signature, the senior Tobin categorically denied he had signed any papers but those for his son's designation.

Three handwriting experts today continued their examination of police listing cards in an effort to discover more signatures similar to the fakes found in Charlestown. The experts are Elizabeth McCarthy, Wilbur Turner and George Smith. The last named is employed by the Boston police department. He has already examined 17,000 signatures on police listing cards from Roxbury, Jamaica, West Roxbury, East Boston and Dorchester.

Today he began to scrutinize cards from Brighton. None of the cards he has thus far examined are similar to the fake signatures in Charlestown.

Police officials have the signature of a Boston policeman which they say looks like the handwriting on the questioned cards, but are not certain it is the same handwriting.

NEW TESTS PLANNED

Expert Smith plans to examine the signatures of several Boston politicians and their close friends in an effort to identify the fake signatures from Charlestown.

Manser, who testified to the authenticity of signatures found on his petitions, asserted last night that the complaint was ridiculous.

Declaring he had anticipated "something as childish as this," he termed Murphy, an aide of former Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols, "a political shipwreck and beachcomber."

The charges Manser said were brought in order to drive him from the race and leave a clear field for Nichols, running for re-election.

HEARING TUESDAY

Together with other similar allegations, the forgery complaint will be considered by the election commission at public hearings beginning Tuesday in City Hall, Chairman David Shaw announced.

Murphy has also filed disqualification moves against candidates Carleton Brett, Union candidate, and Alonzo B. Cook.

In Cook's case it was charged that the names of 15 Catholic churchmen were forged to his petitions.

As a result, District Attorney William J. Foley has assigned two investigators to determine who was responsible for the purported fraud and it was said last night that two persons face possible indictment.

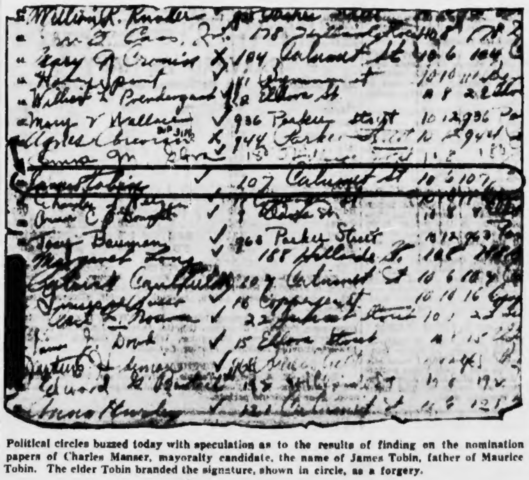
Foley's sleuths, it was declared, have furnished the names of the alleged perpetrators of the forgery. He will place them before the grand jury as soon as his investigation is complete.

5 Dead in Second Dutch Air Crash

THE HAGUE, Netherlands, Oct. 16 (AP)—Five persons were killed today in the second serious crash of Dutch naval planes in the East Indies within three days.

The accident happened near the Island of Banda, it was said, but no further details were available here.

Tobin's Father Listed



Political circles buzzed today with speculation as to the results of finding on the nomination papers of Charles Manser, mayoralty candidate, the name of James Tobin, father of Maurice Tobin. The elder Tobin branded the signature, shown in circle, as a forgery.

25 'Ghost Votes' Cut Off List

Twenty-five "ghost votes" today had been stricken from police election lists as investigators pushed a city-wide checkup on fraudulent recordings by department "traitors."

The potential voter's list in Ward 2, Charlestown, where Boston's first major election scandal was uncovered, included the names of five nonexistent persons, it was disclosed.

All five were registered at City Hall, according to officials directing the probe. They were stricken from both police and City Hall books.

Police Commissioner Timilty, who is co-operating with District Attorney William J. Foley in the investigation, declared that he was confident a number of similar incidents would be revealed before election day, November 2.

Meanwhile a battalion of probers delved into the records of every police station in Boston in an effort to rout out the frauds.

A special squad appointed by Timilty worked in the Charlestown ward, while captains of the various stations personally led the investigations in their jurisdictions.

Two police officers believed to have been responsible for the false listings were being sought out for possible prosecution.

3 Advised to Get Pasteur Cure

Three persons bitten by a fox terrier in Waltham were advised today to undergo the Pasteur anti-rabies treatment after the state department of public health reported the dog was suffering from rabies.

The animal attacked its owner, Mrs. Herbert Jenkins of Brookline, as she was driving her automobile Thursday night. She was bitten in the arm three times, police said, before they shot the animal.

Previously, police said, two children, Charles Damon, Jr., and Joan Hickel, both of Newton, had been bitten by the dog.

Will Fire All Cranky Probers, if Elected Mayor, He Says

Cranky and inhuman visitors and investigators of the municipal welfare department were denounced today by Atty. Alfred Santosuosso of Hyde Park, candidate for mayor.

Santosuosso declared that if elected one of his first official acts will be to investigate reports which have been coming to him for some years past concerning the treatment accorded [illegible] by employes of the welfare department.

Visitors with reputations for unfairness in their dealings with the poor can expect drastic action if he occupies the mayor's chair in the coming four years, he said.

Sane and healthful recreation for adults who now enjoy more leisure because of the 40-hour week which is in force in many Boston industries must be provided by the municipal government, former Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols said today.

FATHER OF PLAYGROUNDS

If elected, he said, he will establish recreational centers on vacant land and on some buildings which have been taken over by the city for non-payment of taxes.

Nichols declared that he is the father of the present Boston playground system, pointing out that in 1926, during his first year of service as Mayor, he began organization of the present method of teacher-supervised playgrounds. Automobile fatalities among Boston children of playground age were reduced by 40 per cent in the following year, he said.

If elected to another term at City Hall more playground extensions and improvements with a view to effecting further reduction in the automobile mortality rate among children will be made, the former Mayor said.

Former Governor Curley, speaking at rallies in Jamaica Plain and Dorchester last night, charged that Mayor Mansfield is incompetent and inexperienced and stated that as a result the City of Boston is in serious financial difficulty now.

"The most serious situation in our history now confronts the people of Boston," he said. "The tax rate is $6 more a thousand than it was when I left office. The municipal deficit is greater than ever."

School Committeeman Maurice J. Tobin has been given the support of the members of the Young [illegible] Movement, a group which, according to their president, [illegible] W. [illegible] of [illegible], were formerly members of the political organization of John W. Higgins, now chief justice of the Massachusetts Superior Court.

Tobin, in speeches last night, warned his audiences against appeals for votes on religious and racial grounds.

He promised an administration free of waste and incompetency and appealed for the support of all taxpayers who want good government.

Terming the alleged forgery of the names of 15 Catholic churchmen on the petition papers of Alonzo B. Cook were an "insult to the Catholic clergy of Boston," Tobin declared that Cook was a "stooge" candidate of former Governor Curley.

The school committeeman demanded that Curley "take Cook out of this race."

Boston's financial difficulties are due to excessive cost of government and the responsibility does not rest on Mayor Mansfield but can be traced back to administrations of some men now seeking another term at City Hall, he said.

FOLEY CITES JOB PARADE

District Attorney William J. Foley last night criticised former Governor Curley for his alleged failure to meet the jobless citizens who marched to the State House to appeal to him for employment.

"Curley skipped that parade. He didn't even review it. But the jobless won't forget," he said.

Foley, who spoke at a series of rallies, appealed to the women voters of Boston to support him in his drive to purge the city of political boss control.

He declared that the registration of 180,730 women was a "healthy sign" and expressed confidence that their votes would result in "clean, good government."

Charles L. Manser of Back Bay last night declared that he is the only genuine Republican in the present field of mayoralty candidates.

He charged that Timothy W. Murphy, campaign director for former Mayor Malcom E. Nichols, and the man who has protested the Manser nomination papers now on file at City Hall, is a "shopworn Democratic politician" and warned his audiences that attempts to remove his name from the mayoralty ballot is the work of a "selfish group who have controlled municipal affairs for the past 20 years."

Former State Auditor Alonzo B. Cook, replying to charges of Tobin that he is a bigot, branded the latter as an "hysterical boy who has suddenly come to the realization that a fight for election as mayor is a man-sized job."

Helen Hughes Gets Royal Welcome in Hollywood

Talent Quest Winner Visits Big Stars At Studios

CULVER CITY, Calif., Oct. 16—Helen Hughes, winner of the Boston American-Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Film Talent Contest stepped off the American Airline plane at Glendale yesterday and shortly after, obtained her initial and thrilling glimpse of the movieland capital.

Accompanied by her chaperone, Miss Hughes was greeted in true film fashion.

Flash bulbs exploded as photographers snapped her picture; interviewers were all primed to take down her first "impression."

WHISKED TO HOTEL

But little time was allowed for questioning at the airport. Instead the pair were hurried to a long black limousine and whisked away to the hotel Ambassador, where a suit of Delft blue and white rooms overlooking the spacious grounds awaited them.

Although the trip had been a long one, lack of sleep from sheer excitement didn't at all dampen Helen's desire to visit the studio on her first afternoon in California.

"It is all so different from Maine," she remarked as the car wound it's way toward the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio in Culver City. "The hills seem so high and the lowlands so low. Now, in Maine, th hills seem low and the lowlands seem high."

Once at the studio, however, there was little time to think of the topographical differences of Maine and California.

SEES STARS AT WORK

For three hours Helen traveled from one set to another, meeting stars, looking at sets, wandering through the makeup and wardrobe departments, discovering the "Why" of sound in films. In short, getting just a hurried glimpse of the wonders of a film studio. Skimming over the surface of the industry in which she will soon take an active part.

Fortunately, a number of companies were at work, giving her an opportunity to meet and talk to such screen favorites as Wallace Beery, Bruce Cabot and Lewis Stone all working in "Bad Man of Brimstone"; Tom Brown, Robert Young and James Stewart, working currently in "Navy Blue and Gold"; Allan Jones, Judy Garland, Fanny Brice, Lynne Carver and Billie Burke on the "Everybody Sing" set, and Joan Crawford, Spencer Tracy and Alan Curtis engaged on scenes from "Mannequin."

Just when Miss Hughes felt that there just couldn't be anything else left to see, she was taken to Lot 2, where an entire village has been erected, covering sixty acres, for the Romanza sequence of "Rosalie," co-starring Eleanor Powell and Nelson Eddy.

MAKES GOOD IMPRESSION

Everyone who met her on the lot was visibly impressed by the simple sincerity of this youngster whose charm and ability sent her to the film capital. Invitations to make return visits to the sets were innumerable and best wishes for her success in Hollywood were literally showered upon her from every side.

Although the remainder of the weekend will be given over to resting from her journey and seeing Southern California, work in earnest is scheduled to begin on Monday when appointments with studio executives, camera men, hair dressers, makeup experts and wardrobe consultants have been arranged.

Last night she got her first glimpse of Hollywood night life when she dined at the famous Cocoanut Grove.

Officials said there would be no prosecutions launched against the employes of the concern, that they are only wanted for questioning.

Miss Anna Niland, principal of the school, told police a man recently had been engaged by school authorities to rid the building of mice and rats, but she did not know whether his bait contained poison.

Realty Drive in Spain

Italy to Recall Troops in Spain

9-Power Committee Hears Promise of Duce's Aide to Co-operate

LONDON, Oct. 16 (AP)—Count Dino Grandi, Italy's delegate, told the non-intervention sub-committee today that Italy "accepts the proposal for partial withdrawal of a certain number of volunteers" from the Spanish civil war.

The nine-power sub-committee adjourned until next Tuesday after hearing statements by the British, French, Italian and German members.

The nine diplomats, meeting in a tense atmosphere created by British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden's demand for prompt action, heard the Italian delegate promise his country's "loyal and firm desire to co-operate."

The main question before the meeting was that of withdrawing foreign volunteers—especially Italian—from the Spanish war to remove the principal source of danger that a general European conflict would emanate from Spain.

URGE SPEEDY ACTION

In offering co-operation, Count Grandi, however, specified that withdrawals must "be equal quantities from both sides."

This, he said, was to be regarded as "a substantial beginning of the application" of the British plan for evacuation of foreign volunteers from Spain.

The British and French spokesmen again pressed all members to urge speedy action on their governments.

Count Grandi suggested that both Spanish factions be approached for their views concerning withdrawal.

The Italian took occasion to protest against "the intolerable abuse" of neutral flags "by vessels carrying prohibited war material to the Spanish Reds (government) and even by ships belonging to the Spanish Reds."

Prominent in Count Grandi's speech was a demand that belligerent rights be accorded Insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco's regime.

The conflict between Italy and Soviet Russia, which has punctuated the history of the non-intervention committee with frequent crises, arose again.

Count Grandi, in an evident slap at Russia, which opposes recognition of the Franco regime in any manner, said:

"Those who declare themselves in favor of non-intervention but against recognition of belligerent rights can not be considered as neutrals in respect to the Spanish conflict."

FRANCE OFFERS PLAN

Ambassador Corbin, for France, outlined five points of the Anglo-French withdrawal plans and said if they were not accepted the French government "would feel constrained to reserve to themselves full liberty of action."

The five points outlined by the French ambassador were:

1—Immediate withdrawal of volunteers.

2—That after an international commission had reported volunteers had been and were being withdrawn in a satisfactory manner "certain of the rights which international practice grants to belligerents should then be granted."

3—That the governments represented on the committee should exercise all their influence with the two Spanish factions to ensure that in a very short time a definite number of volunteers should be withdrawn from each side.

4—That arrangements be made to ensure there should be no new departure of volunteers from any country for Spain.

5—That a system of control be instituted on the lines of the Von Dulm-Hemming report (which outlined a scheme for rebuilding non-intervention cordons around Spain).

Japs Say China Hurls Gas

SHANGHAI, Oct. 16 (AP)—Japanese authorities staged a dramatic demonstration today of alleged Chinese use of poison gas.

Fifty foreign correspondents were assembled in the office of the Japanese consulate general to receive an announcement which they had been told would be so momentous it had to be made on Japanese territory.

They were shown a shell which emitted evil smelling fumes which the Japanese asserted was phosgene gas. Lieutenant Colonel Hajime Tani of the Japanese chemical corps declared the shell contained sufficient phosgene gas to kill the entire roomful.

Chinese reiterated their denial that they were using poison gas. They declared a demonstration such as the Japanese gave would be possible in any high school chemistry laboratory.

(The Japanese Foreign office in Tokyo earlier had declared it had "indisputable proof" that the Chinese were using phosgene gas.)

Jap Bombs Still Rain on Shanghai

SHANGHAI, Oct. 16 (AP)—Heavy Japanese bombing activities continued today in the Shanghai area, particularly in the vicinity of the Markham Road Railway yards opposite the sector of the International Settlement border guarded by United States marines.

A Japanese naval spokesman reported widespread raids by Japanese planes included attacks on numerous railroad points south and west of Shanghai.

Reports from North China declared Chinese forces were making spirited resistance against the Japanese march southward toward Tsinan, capital of Shantung Province.

In one of the attacks on the Shanghai front six Japanese bombers released their bombs in unison, causing a terrific explosion that echoed and re-echoed through the International Settlement.

Tells of China Ship Bombing

Hingham Girl, 12, Shanghai Refugee

Following the thrilling experience of being on a ship which was bombed near Shanghai, China, 12-year-old Jacqueline Young of Hingham arrived in Boston by plane from Phoenix, Arizona.

She stopped off in the Arizona city for a two weeks' visit with relatives, her mother coming directly to Boston from San Francisco.

"When the steamship President Hoover, on which my mother and I were passengers, was bombed off Shanghai, we were ordered below by the ship's officers," said Miss Young, relating her war-time experience.

"The ship was not hit by the bombs but it was plenty exciting.

"My daddy is still in Shanghai, where he represents an American business firm. I don't know when I will see him again but I hope it will be soon, as I don't like to have him where the war is going on."

Schacht Awaits Hitler Reply

BERLIN, Oct. 16 (AP)—Dr. Hjalmar Schacht will know next Wednesday whether he can continue as the Reich's minister of economics, informed financial sources said today.

These sources said Chancellor Hitler has promised to let Dr. Schacht know by then whether he accepts a set of conditions Dr. Schacht has specified for continuing in office.

Financial circles said it was highly unlikely that Der Fuehrer would agree. His resignation, therefore, is regarded as certain.

Dr. Schacht's conditions were said to include a demand for the civilian economy priority of needs of commerce and industry over those of the Nazi party and army, a curb on erection of monumental buildings and other structures and coordination of the four-year plan with powers of economics ministry.

High Bail Keeps Girl in Jail

Unable to furnish $15,000 bail, Miss Esther L. Chase, Greylock road, Allston, charged as accessory in holdup of Sam's restaurant in Nantucket July 6, languished in Plymouth jail today.

Miss Chase, attractive food checker in the restaurant at the time of the $5800 holdup, pleaded not guilty before Judge Daniel Shea in Hingham court yesterday. She will be held for the grand jury.

At yesterday's hearing two witnesses testified that Miss Chase was in the company of Edward P. Simpson, now under indictment for the slaying of two Newton patrolmen, on three different occasions. More desperate mothers hurl their young in the river or leave them on garbage heaps outside the International Settlement.

Others deposit their mites of babies in baskets especially placed outside of such institutions as "the Door of Hope," run by the Catholic Sisters of Mercy.

Those babies who survive the horrors and rigors of war eventually become what are called "wolf children," who infest dark lanes and gutters.

Coated in mud and dressed in newspapers, others present a truly pitiable spectacle. Backyard cats and barnyard dogs fare more fortunately in giving birth to their young than do the fear-crazed famished Chinese mothers who have been driven from their wretched mud hovels and straw huts by Japanese bombs and now are ravaged by cholera, beriberi and other diseases.

HOMES ON SHELVES

Some of them, with their starving, shivering broods, make their homes on shelves in empty stores, sleep in coffins or live in the ruins of bombed buildings.

Every day there are seen pitiable processions of these homeless destitute war-mothers bearing newborn infants, mere fragments of humanity, to places where they are baptized with cholera disinfectant.

Too weak to sustain life and too poor to shelter their young, many of these broken mothers leave their infants furtively on the doorsteps of American and other foreign benefactors.

Many of these "wolf-waifs" eventually find their way to a children's home conducted by 74-year-old Maud Truxton Henderson of Richmond, Va., who, although unmarried, has an unofficial family of 250 children rescued from the streets.

AMERICAN WOMAN AIDS

When a visit was made to this home, which is on the very edge of the war zone—shells were falling all around, but this gallant Southern woman who has dedicated her life to China's poor, refused to leave.

"If any of these helpless tots die from Japanese bombs," she said, "I must die with them."

Miss Henderson, who has spent 27 years in China without revisiting Virginia, is the daughter of San Francisco's first postmaster.

Now Listen to Me

Boston Evening American Photo

"Now listen to me," is what Attorney Robert Robinson appears to be saying, with pointed finger, in above photo, to Miss Esther L. Chase, attractive Allston girl now held in high bail in connection with the last summer's holdup of Sam's restaurant, Nantasket. Witnesses testified they had seen Miss Chase in company of Edward P. Simpson, under indictment for killing two Newton officers and who, police say, has confessed to the restaurant robbery.

Greeted on Coast

CAPT. MAYO — SENATOR WALSH

Senator David I. Walsh, chairman of the Senate naval affairs committee, is shown here being greeted at Los Angeles by Captain C. B. Mayo during his study of Naval problems on the West Coast. Walsh advocated an adequate Navy and predicted that the battle fleet will always be on the West Coast, terming as "unpatriotic" sectional disputes between the East and West coasts over location of the fleet and important bases.

$700,000 Truck Signals Junked

Thirty-five thousand or more truck owners throughout the commonwealth were today to find they had invested approximately $700,000 needlessly in signalling devices, declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

The precedent-setting decision also struck a blow to the half-dozen firms engaged in manufacturing the safety signalling devices, which had formerly been required by the state department of public works.

In an opinion written by Justice Henry T. Lummus, the full bench of the Supreme Court held that the state public works department under the law has no power to require truck owners to install the signalling devices, costing approximately $20 each.

How far the court's ruling can be extended toward limiting powers of the public works department and the registry of motor vehicles in other motor regulations was a matter of widespread conjecture today.

Frank A. Goodwin, registrar of motor vehicles, speaking in New Bedford, declared the regulation declared void by the Supreme Court was established only by the public works department, and has nothing to do with the Registry.

No regulations regarding signalling devices for passenger cars have been imposed by his department, he said.

Deputy Registrar of Motor Vehicles Anthony A. Bonzagni declared that the ruling would in no way affect the registry's requirement that cars be inspected semi-annually and obtain stickers denoting the machine equipment was in operating condition.

According to Bonzagni, a special statute gave the registry that power, requiring motorists to have approved horns, brakes, headlights and other equipment.

Missing Arab Chief in Syria

JERUSALEM, Oct. 16 (AP)—The Grand Mufti of Jerusalem slipped out of Palestine last night, fleeing to the Lebanese republic aboard a sailboat, as British authorities tightened their control over Moslem activities in a determined effort to suppress terrorism in the Holy Land.

The Mufti, the only member of the Arab higher committee not already deported or banished from Palestine, sailed to Naqoura, dressed in a simple bedouin costume. He spent the night at [illegible] and then departed.

The Holy Land was relatively quiet again under strict military vigil. But only yesterday two British constables were slain from ambush and other acts of terrorism had resulted in the killing and wounding of many Jews and Arabs.

The only new incident was the burning of the customs shed, the wireless room and other buildings at Lydda airport. This was regarded as possible sabotage.

The Mufti, whose name is Haj Amin Effendi Al Husseini, had been reported hiding from British authorities for the past two weeks in the holy mosque of Omar, closely guarded by his adherents.

The British had guarded the mosque but did not enter because it was sacred to the Moslems.

Now that he has chosen to leave the country, it was feared a new, bitter chapter of internal troubles was brewing for the Holy Land, with the Mufti and other scattered members of the Arab high committee directing activities from havens outside Palestine.

Holy See Paper Makes Denial of Jap Report

Vatican Takes a New Step to Refute Misleading News Story

VATICAN CITY, Oct. 16 (INS)—The Holy See's indignation at misrepresentation of its Far Eastern attitude by an American news agency reached today with a fresh official denial of the story as "false and tendentious."

With the obvious approval of Pope Pius, the official Vatican organ, Osservatore Romano, tonight will print, under a brief outline of the story published in America, the following denial from the Department of State that the Holy See took any line in the Sino-Japanese conflict:

"Although the fact that his news is false and tendentious is clear to anyone who knows the principles which inspire the activities of the Holy See, nevertheless, the Holy See is preoccupied by the damage this false news may produce, especially where Catholic missionaries in China are concerned, and hastens to deny the entire contents of the article.

"None of it comes from the Vatican authorities. It is a complete invention, false and evidently tendentious."

The statement appeared under the heading, "False and Tendentious News."

With several denials in Rome yesterday and in Washington last night, followed by tonight's statement in Osservatore, the Vatican probably has never taken such severe steps to rectify a misleading news account, it was believed.

3 Mills Curtail Newsprint

QUEBEC, Que., Oct. 16 (INS)—At least three Quebec newsprint mills have decided to reduce production to prevent American publishers from "hoarding" Canadian newsprint and to render the $50 per ton newsprint price level for next year ineffective, it was reported today.

Price Brothers & Co., Ltd., are operating on a five-day week, starting today, at River Bend and Kenogami, while Anglo-Canadian Mills in Quebec and Canadian International in Three Rivers are reported taking similar action.

It is stated here that American publishers are accumulating all possible supplies of Canadian newsprint in order to have sufficient stocks on hand to make them independent for the start of next year and to bring about a lowering of the price of Canadian newsprint.

Canadian mills, by curtailing production, are said to hope they will be able to forestall this strategy.

Reed did not testify.

According to police, Terrill was walking along Haverhill street, Charlestown, with Gladys H. Oxner of Perkins street, Charlestown, when he was struck over the head with a cane by Reed.

Beautiful Gowns at Frost Wedding

JANE FROST'S WEDDING yesterday afternoon to Nathaniel Clark was one of the most beautifully costumed nuptial affairs we have ever seen . . . even in the movies . . . From the time the limousines began to drive up to let out their fashionable guests, till the bride and bridegroom emerged from the church to smile radiantly at the battery of news photographers, the affair was very picturesque and beautiful . . .

The beauty of Jane's white velvet gown was in its simplicity . . . her tulle veil fell from a coronet of orange blossoms and her only jewels were a diamond and emerald bracelet and her engagement ring, which, of course, she wore on her right hand . . .

The bridesmaids were clad in Grecian gowns of shimmering green and gold lame, which were so exquisite that even the most fashion-conscious New Yorkers in the audience let out a gasp of admiration as the procession moved up the aisle . . . The gowns were pleated from shoulder to hem, and bound in at the waistline with narrow bands of the fabric . . . the sleeves were long and pleated and they carried huge bouquets of gold, flame and rust chrysanthemums . . .

It's Not Too Late To Preserve Relishes

By MARTHA LEE

While driving north of Boston last Sunday I was especially attracted to the roadside stands. They carried the foliage for beauty and [illegible].

I think preserving should be listed as one of woman's natural instincts, don't you?

The public season may be over, but it isn't too late to try one of my dependable Chutney recipes below. Here are two methods of making this appetizing relish, which is so popular with hot or cold meats. If ripe tomatoes are not available you will want to try the first recipe.

CHUTNEY NO. 1

One pound sour apples, peeled, cored and chopped

1 pound white onions, chopped

2 large peppers, seeded and chopped

1 package seedless raisins

1 quart cider vinegar

1 pound sugar

1 teaspoon salt

1½ tablespoons mustard

¼ teaspoon tumeric

Mix the cut apples and the raisins and pour over them one pint of the vinegar. Let the mixture stand overnight. Add all the other ingredients. Boil the mixture rapidly until it is slightly thick and clear. Pour it into clean, sterile, hot jars and seal.

CHUTNEY NO. 2

2 dozen medium-sized ripe tomatoes, peeled and chopped

1 dozen tart apples, peeled and chopped

1 cup celery, cut fine

6 medium-sized onions

3 green peppers, seeded and chopped

1 pound seedless raisins

2 quarts vinegar

3 cups sugar

Salt to taste

Combine the chopped ingredients with the vinegar, sugar, spices and raisins. Boil the mixture rapidly until it is slightly thick and clear. Stir steadily to prevent scorching. Pour into clean, sterilized hot jars and seal.

Griffin-Manning Nuptials Held

RICH GLOWING velvet of bridesmaids' gowns contrasted with a chrysanthemum-bedecked altar to form the setting for the fashionable Griffin-Manning nuptials solemnized at St. Thomas' Church in Jamaica Plain.

Dark-eyed Virginia . . . who played such an active part in Ace of Clubs and Boston Chapter of Trinity College . . . was one of the year's loveliest brides as she walked altarward on the arm of her father, Joseph Manning, to exchange wedding vows with John Griffin of Weymouth.

Her eldest sister, Mrs. John Cunningham, was her honor attendant . . . her zinnia red velvet frock topped by a short brown veil . . . a cluster of chrysanthemums completing the costume.

Another sister, Mrs. Edward Conroy . . . the former Catherine Manning . . . led the quintette of bridesmaids . . . their peacock blue gowns effectively set off by a fetching brown veil headdress and bouquets of white chrysanthemums. In the group were Mary Kingsley of Brookline, Frances Smith of Exeter, N. H., Katherine Hearn of Dorchester and Mrs. Wallace McPherson of Brookline.

Mr. Griffin's brother, Charles, served as his best man. Ushering at the church and at the reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Manning, were Raymond Barrett of Milton, Joseph A. Britton of Long Island, Joseph K. Collins of Brookline, Edward Conroy of Jamaica Plain, John M. Cunningham of Jamaica Plain and Lawrence Adams of Exeter, N. H.

Mrs. Manning chose a figured lame frock with a cape of ermine for her daughter's wedding and Mrs. Griffin was smartly costumed in black velvet and cluster of orchids.

Following the breakfast the couple left on a motor tour of the fashionable resorts of the Carolinas and Virginia.

Self-Made Girl

By HAZEL LIVINGSTONE

CHAPTER 30

All through the dinner that she was too nervous to eat, and the long talk of Constance and home and Constance's trip around the world, Linda was breathless.

She answered Mr. Scott prettily, she plied him with questions she knew he'd like to answer and she knew she was getting along splendidly.

But she couldn't conquer the breathlessness. She felt as though she had been running a long way.

The waiter brought coffee and Clyde Scott lit a cigarette. "Now tell me what's on your mind, Linda. What are you worrying about?"

"Oh, it's nothing serious. Perhaps I shouldn't have bothered you at all, but seeing you Saturday . . . It brought everything back. When Constance and I used to play together, and my mother and father were alive. They're both dead now, . . . you know—"

"I've had rather a hard time, here in New York," she went on, when she could trust her voice. "I had almost no money and wanted to continue with my education.

TO CALIFORNIA

"Oh, I want to go far away. I don't know where. Baltimore is even too near—and so's Washington. I thought of the Pacific coast. I knew a couple of girls who came from San Francisco. I thought, perhaps, I'd like to go there."

Mr. Scott considered.

"There's an old friend, Senator Arnold. He and father were great friends in Washington. By the way, now that I remember it, father thought a lot of you."

She waited while he seated himself at a desk in the writing room and took pen and paper.

Afterwards, as she read the letter Mr. Scott had given her to take to California, she felt a new person already.

"Dear Senator: This will introduce my young friend, Lynn Perry, a classmate of my Constance, and a great pet of father's.

"Lynn had decided that she has had about all of New York she can stand. She is going to San Francisco to look for a position and she is capable of holding a good one, as you will discover for yourself. Of course, she knows shorthand and typing and all that.

"I feel sure that you, who collect art and proteges and are interested in all young people, will be interested in her and, perhaps, help her get settled in the right place.

"Sincerely,

"CLYDE SCOTT."

To Robert Dearing, she said nothing except that family affairs necessitated her giving up her position, and leaving the city at once. If he thought she was going to Philadelphia, so much the better.

She went to say goodbye to Mr. Hollinger, the only person in the place for whom she had any feeling. But he had not forgiven her.

He was kind, but very, very dignified.

Dressed in her smart black, the fur collar of the grand topcoat turned up against the November chill, Lynn Perry boarded the Twentieth Century and felt that she'd left Linda and all the past behind.

Married Comrades

By ADELE GARRISON

CHAPTER 433

Samuel Braxton had gauged correctly his stepson's reactions to his presence in my car.

Even though I was not driving it when we finally arrived at Vanderbilt Hall and asked a "campus cop" to give Ronald a message, the boy evidently sensed trouble from my unexpected presence at Yale, and his first question was a frantic one.

"Has—has anything happened to mother?" he asked, and Samuel Braxton's voice and mine united in a vociferous "No!"

"Then why?" he asked just as Dicky sounded the horn of the Braxton car, then deftly tooled it into a parking space a few yards behind us.

"I'll let your father explain while I go and speak to my husband," I said, and descended from the car and hurried toward my husband before Ronald could give me a hand.

"You sure must have dawdled by the roadside," he said when I had come up to him. I purposely hurried over my words.

"All right, shoot," he said, and with a feeling that I was burning my bridges behind me, I struck into the tale I had concocted for his ears during the last few minutes of my drive.

"I found out that Braxton believes he could weather the storm if he had just a little money," I said. "He's not sure, of course, but you know that telephone call he made—

"Well, it was a sort of last gasp thing which yielded unexpected results. He was so excited that he was garrulous, and he told me that if he only had his household expenses and those of the children off his hands for a month or two he could make another try at it."

"You don't need to say any more," Dicky observed dryly. "I see very clearly how you leaped into the breach and told him you'd lend him the money to foot his household bills for the next month or two, plus the college and school blowouts, so he could have his mind free for his great financial moves."

ALL FOOD FATS EQUALLY FATTENING

By IDA JEAN KAIN

We are fascinated by every new development in diet, particularly if it is rumored to have anything to do with reducing.

That is why the experiments in which fats were tagged with heavy hydrogen to trace their chemical change in the body received such widespread attention.

These experiments, conducted by Dr. Harold Clayton Urey and Dr. Rudolf Schoenheimer of the Columbia University School of Medicine, showed that certain fats are burned more rapidly than others.

The experiments did not show one kind of food fat to be less fattening than another.

Dr. Schoenheimer states that tagging of atoms with heavy hydrogen in the experiments has no application to dietetics. As far as weight is concerned, it is immaterial whether fat burns fast or slow.

The calorie difference between your food intake and your energy output is the main factor in weight.

Send for the "Calorie Chart" and the "Pointers to Slimness," which will start you off on your weight program. Write to Ida Jean Kain, care this paper, and enclose a stamped, adressed envelope, large size.

'Shall I Join a Church?' Asks Reader; the Answer Is 'Yes'

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Shall I join a church? Do you believe a young person should affiliate himself with a religious organization?

These are the questions a Melrose young woman asks me today.

My reply to both is YES. In the troubled world of today we cannot have too much religion. Frankly, it's my belief that a vast amount of our present national and international worries may be attributed to a too general lack of faith in the Almighty.

I do not hesitate to say that before we can expect any real recovery in this country, or any other country, we must make up our minds to feed the soul as well as the body. One starves as readily as the other.

But there is another reason why I strongly recommend church attendance and church activity. There is no better place in all the world for boy to meet girl. There never was and probably never will be a finer matrimonial agency.

Go to your church tomorrow. That's the thing to do. Meet your pastor and tell him you want to become actively interested in the congregation's activities.

Labor Harmony Inducement To Buying

Attracts Prudent Investors, Says B. C. Forbes

By B. C. FORBES

"Plus a skilled staff of 4015."

That line stands out most prominently of all in a statement published by the Guaranty Trust Company of New York summarizing its resources (of $1,852,543,515).

Chairman William C. Potter and President W. Palen Conway manifestly attach prime importance to the brains, experience and skill of those comprising this worldlike banking organization.

Andrew Carnegie once said: "If our plants were to be burned down overnight, we could rebuild them. But if our organization were to be destroyed, that would be fatal."

When I contemplate investing in securities I give chief weight to the character and caliber of the management.

• • •

Has not the time come for enlightened corporation directors and executives to emphasize the worth of their personnel; to draw attention to harmonious labor relations where such exist, to acquaint stockholders and the public with whatever plans are in operation for the well being of employes?

• • •

True, many corporation heads add a sentence or two at the end of their annual reports expressing appreciation of the services rendered by the employes. Usually, however, such expressions are perfunctory. Some chief executives do use language which sounds sincere.

Here are samples of the closing sentences in annual reports of topnotch companies:

Walter S. Gifford, president, American Telephone & Telegraph Company: "Based on the record of the system in the depression, whatever may be the problems which the future may add to those already faced, the men and women of the Bell System can be counted on to press forward to greater accomplishments with the skill, enthusiasm and courage which they have shown in the past."

Alfred P. Sloan, chairman, General Motors Corporation: "I again express and record appreciation of the efforts of the organization, its loyalty to the institution, the progressiveness of its thinking and the aggressiveness of its actions as evidenced by the new records established during the year."

T. M. Girdler, chairman, Republic Steel Corporation: "The same spirit of cooperation and loyalty on the part of the employes of your company which has been in evidence, has continued throughout the past year, and is a vital factor in the results shown and the progress being made.

A. J. Robertson, chairman, F. A. Merrick, president, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company: "Westinghouse men and women are an efficient and capable band. It is a pleasure to acknowledge their intelligent efforts in advancing the interests of the company."

• • •

Not a few investors hereafter are going to be influenced more by employe relations, by labor relations. Where harmony has long ruled, where employe loyalty has been demonstrated, prudent investors will be attracted. They will fight shy of the securities of corporations frequently at loggerheads with their wage-earners.

From every point of view, it is desirable that those running large corporations, institutions or other enterprises devote more attention to the human element.

"Plus a skilled staff of 4015" provides a text for executives all over the country to ponder and on which to base a mental sermon for themselves.

Stocks Meet Substantial Buying Support After Dip

Thin Markets, Bonds, Weighed By Bankers

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

International News Service Financial Writer

Beneath the surface ballyhoo of the nation-wide bankers' convention, held here this week, there was unheralded sober thinking about the realities.

First hand contact with delegates from all parts of the country revealed that bankers were greatly interested in two significant problems.

One was the effect of the new "thinness" of the stock market under federal regulations on the attractiveness of brokers loans. Bankers recognized that the narrowness of the markets increased the difficulty of realizing on loans through the device of selling out the collateral.

LONG TERM BONDS

Secondly, the banks, hard pressed for earnings and, therefore, tempted to place a greater than normal proportion of their funds in investments were deeply interested in the ultimate hazard of capital losses from a decline in long term bond prices when, as and if interest rates should rise substantially from current subnormal levels.

In regard to brokers loans which are still extremely small in the aggregate compared with the 1929 totals one competent financier, who is sympathetic to the financial objectives of the Roosevelt administration, said that only one half of the job of reforming the security markets had been accomplished.

More Activity On Recovery Turn

NEW YORK, Oct. 16—After a moderate sell-off at the opening, stocks met substantial buying support in today's brief session. Chrysler, down about 10 points in two days, recovered 3 and many recently backward leaders pushed up major fractions to 2.

Activity picked up on the recovery turn and the ticker tape occasionally was pressed to keep pace with trades. Into the final hour prices were around their best.

Bolstering sentiment was a revival of hopes federal authorities will soon take steps to ease margin requirements and the special session of Congress at least amend the capital gains and undistributed profits tax laws. Buying by "bargain hunters" was also seen as a market factor.

Prominent on the upturn were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, U. S. Rubber, Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, Deere, American Telephone, Anaconda, Kennecott, Coca-Cola, Loew's, International Paper & Power preferred, Westinghouse, Du Pont, Amerada, Union Pacific, Crown Cork and St. Joseph Lead.

Rails and utilities were inclined to mark time.

Bonds improved in spots and commodities displayed advancing tendencies.

CURRENT TOPICS

Among items studied in the boardrooms was the estimate of the F. W. Dodge Corp. indicating construction work started during September in 37 Eastern states fell almost 10 per cent below the level for the same 1936 month and was off about 28 per cent from August this year.

Holders of shares in companies catering to the agricultural population noted figures of the Department of Agriculture placing 1937 crop production at only 6 per cent under the record established in 1920. It was believed total for the year would be the largest since 1928.

The French franc was unchanged at 3.36⅛ cents in initial foreign currency transactions. Sterling was off ⅛ of a cent at $4.96.

Old Boston Stock Firms Merge

Effective December 1 next the brokerage firms of Schirmer, Atherton & Company and J. W. Bowen & Company will merge. Business of the combined firms, with memberships on the New York and Boston Stock Exchange, will be conducted under the name of Schirmer, Atherton & Company at 79 Milk street, Boston, the present location of Schirmer, Atherton & Company's offices.

Unlike some recent servicing arrangements made by Boston houses with New York correspondents, this change completely preserves the local identity of the enlarged firm.

In connection with the proposed merger, Harry M. Stonemetz and James P. McDonough, at present general partners of J. W. Bowen and Company, will become general partners of Schirmer, Atherton and Company. James W. Bowen will retire as an active figure in the brokerage business but will become a special partner of Schirmer, Atherton and Company. The partners of the consolidated firm will thus consist of the foregoing and Louis M. Atherton, Russell A. Ballou, John A. Caldwell, Mark R. Hodges, R. Colgate V. Mann, Charles P. Atherton and Frank A. Schirmer (special). Mr. Mann is the New York Stock Exchange member of the firm, and Messrs. Stonemetz, Hodges and Charles P. Atherton, the Boston members.

This contemplated union brings together two Boston houses which date back more than 50 years each.

Home Owning Made Easier By Loans

"Uppermost in the minds of every home owner is the desire for a debt free home and the most effective means of accomplishing this is by the use of the long term amortized mortgage. It is also necessary for the borrower to have a repayment plan that he is able to meet from his income and since most borrowers are accustomed to paying their bills monthly, the monthly payment mortgage loan appeals to them. As it is difficult to meet large payments, even that of taxes, the borrower also appreciates a plan whereby the taxes may be taken care of on a monthly payment plan," states Ernest A. Hale, President of the Suffolk Co-Operative Federal Savings & Loan Co. of Boston.

MONTHLY PAYMENTS

"Most purchasers of homes are planning to pay for the home out of future income which will be received periodically over the years for which the mortgage is written and while needing a relatively large mortgage, also requires monthly payments within his ability to successfully carry out.

"The borrower also desires and is entitled to a clearly understood contract whose terms are simple and definite and these requirements are fulfilled by the Federal direct reduction loan mortgage which sets forth the entire contract in easy understandable terms.

TIME IS MEASURED

"Mortgage borrowers on a Federal direct mortgage plan know the time it will take to repay the mortgage, the exact amount of the monthly payment required to liquidate the mortgage and pay the real estate taxes and as the payment steadily reduces the outstanding balance.

"This mortgage loan plan is of great assistance to most home purchasers as the majority of families do not have a great deal of accumulated capital and need a helpful financing plan.

UP TO $20,000 LOANED

"This type of mortgage loan can be made in amounts up to $20,000 on a repayment plan covering many years and in an amount as large as eighty per cent of the appraised value of the property involved.

"All the terms of this modern plan of home financing meet the requirements of the average borrower and enable the family with a reasonable amount of money to become home owners and enjoy the advantage of home ownership while paying for the house in which they are living."

Suggests Pay Cut To Balance Budget

By LEWIS HANEY

(Professor of Economics, New York University)

Special to Boston Evening American

NEW YORK, Oct. 16—Perhaps the most interesting questions put to me this week are the following:

1—Harbor Beach, Michigan, asks the following important questions: "Should we blame President Roosevelt too much for doing what will win votes for any politician? The financial policies would be the same regardless of the man. Why not make it profitable to Congress to balance the budget? I would propose a constitutional amendment, reducing their pay 50 per cent for any session that they adjourn with an unbalanced budget."

I think this is very ingenious and contains some possibilities for improving our political system.

First, however, I don't agree that it makes no difference who is President. Our waste and debt are not the fault of Congress alone. I believe that a man of the sort that Grover Cleveland was would never have led us into such debt.

You should remember that a President is supposed to be a bigger man than the average Congressman, and he has the power to veto any bill.

* * *

But the idea of requiring efficiency of our government officials is excellent. I don't know whether a 50 per cent cut in pay would turn the trick or not. Maybe it would. But why not penalize more heavily those who actually vote for the wasteful measures? (They might be made ineligible for re-election.)

You go on to provide for an exception in case of national defense. Of course that might be necessary. It would be a ticklish matter, however, for dictators always make "emergencies" so that they can get more power and money to spend.

Perhaps the two best suggestions are to limit total taxes in any one year to some percentage of the average national income during the preceding ten years, and to provide further that every voter pay some minimum tax that would vary with the size of the government's spending.

* * *

(2) West New York (N. J.) writes: "I would like to know the purchasing value of the dollar from the point of view of cost of living for the average salaried man for certain years. I understand the dollar is worth about 60 cents. My idea is to check with the 1913 dollar."

In answer, the following table gives average purchasing power in terms of living cost, on a percentage scale in which the average during 1923-25 is taken as 100:

1913	166
1922	104
1926	98
1929	102
1932	131
1937	113

You will note that 113 is 32 per cent less than 166. This means that the dollar buys 32 per cent less of the things required for ordinary living than it did in 1913. It also buys about 14 per cent less than in 1932.

The cost of living is now about 25 per cent higher than in the spring of 1933.

"The 60-cent dollar" means nothing except on paper. It means that the government pays 35 paper dollars for an ounce of gold instead of 20.67 paper dollars as it used to.

State Leads in Savings Banks

Massachusetts has 193 mutual savings banks—the largest number of any state in the Union. In the city of Boston there are 23 and almost every suburb has one or more. Savings banks are among the oldest banks in the state—the earliest, the Provident Institution for Savings, being incorporated in 1816—and many others are over 100 years old.

Mutual savings banks have no stockholders and are conducted solely for the benefit of their depositors. All earnings after payment of expenses and taxes are paid out in dividends to depositors or held in the surplus fund for their protection. The United States Supreme Court has defined a mutual savings bank as follows:

"An institution in the hands of disinterested persons, the profit of which, after deducting the necessary expenses of conducting the business, inure wholly to the benefit of the depositors in dividends or in reserved surplus for their greater security."

Under the Massachusetts law only a mutual institution may be called a savings bank.

The deposits in the 193 Massachusetts mutual savings banks today are $2,154,000,000 and the number of depositors 2,848,000.

'New Life' Up 1.1 In September

Association of Life Insurance Presidents announced that life underwriting last month was 1.1 per cent above the September, 1936, total, while production for the first nine months of 1937 was 6.6 per cent above the like 1936 period. Total new business of 40 companies in September was $637,595,000, comparing with $630,831,000 a year ago.

These figures are based on new paid-for business—exclusive of revivals, increases and dividend additions—of 40 companies having 82 per cent of the total life insurance outstanding in all United States legal reserve companies.

Member Trades 22.41 P. C. of Total

Members of the New York Stock Exchange during the week ended September 18 traded 3,701,018 shares for their own account, or 22.41 per cent of total Exchange transactions against 19.44 per cent in preceding week and 20.59 per cent in week ended September 4, according to SEC compilations.

Abitibi Recoup Plan Okayed

TORONTO, Oct. 16 (INS)—Plan of the bondholders committee for sale of assets and re-organization of the $100,000,000 Abitibi Power and Paper Company, now in receivership, was approved by the bondholders today. It is now subject to court approval.

Approval was given over the emphatic opposition of Arthur Meighen, Sir Henry Drayton and J. L. Ralston, who criticized the proposal because it involves issue and sale of about $12,000,000 new prior lien securities ahead of the present $48,267,000 first mortgage gold bonds, and because the proposed new convertible income debentures to be issued in part payment to present bondholders were non-cumulative.

Speakers opposing the plan accused J. P. Ripley, New York, chairman of the bondholders committee, of "dictation."

Boston Brokers' Market Opinions

Unless there is some news of a stimulating nature, necessitous liquidation will probably continue to be the dominant factor and a worthwhile rally be postponed until this liquidation has run its course.—J. S. Wilson, Josephthal & Co.

Over the week-end there may be a tendency to await any development which may be ahead as an aftermath of the address of Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the board of the Chase National Bank. In this respect, it could hardly be termed a "surprise" if the Securities and Exchange Commission made a reply shortly.—J. E. Molloy, Hornblower & Weeks.

Unless adverse circumstances are in the making more detrimental to values than can now be perceived it would seem that recent shrinkages in the prices of many seasoned securities had discounted at least to a considerable extent any probable contraction in earning power.—Elmer H. Bright & Co.

The base established on Wednesday by the industrial group is substantially intact and prices ought to respond vigorously to any favorable news developments.—H. D. Comer, Paine, Webber & Co.

Profits Tax Law Seen As Employment Menace

The Committee of Twenty-five, recently organized through the efforts of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts, although recognizing the necessity of a short term plan for immediate relief of unemployment, knows from its studies that no permanent solution of the unemployment problem in Massachusetts can be brought about except through an expansion of industry, trade and business in general.

The committee has expressed the opinion that one of the outstanding deterrents to business expansion is the undistributed profits tax, and, as part of its long range program, plans to present to the Secretary of the Treasury and to the Congress recommendations for the amendment or repeal of the law imposing this tax. In order to present the strongest possible case, the Committee of Twenty-five is sending to all industrial and trade corporations doing business in Massachusetts a questionnaire designed to elicit or secure the fullest possible information as to how this tax has affected, is affecting and will affect their ability to maintain or to increase the number of their employes.

The committee feels certain that with the detailed and definite information it will have as the result of sending questionnaires to the corporations doing business in Massachusetts it will be able to present through concrete instances powerful arguments calculated to secure proper amendments to this law, so that this tax may not continue to operate to keep Massachusetts residents out of employment from securing jobs which otherwise would be open to them.

Cooking Secrets Divulged by Martha Lee

Belmont Wives Hear American-Advertiser Culinary Expert

Many Belmont husbands will find their wives better cooks today after the demonstration of culinary art given by Miss Martha Lee, of the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser home cooking school in the First Methodist Church, Belmont, last night.

The demonstration, interspersed with humorous remarks about the origin of familiar kitchen quotations, attracted a large number of the church's congregation—yes, even the men folk.

SEASONAL FOODS

Miss Lee explained that, in the winter months, we like heavier foods and it is only natural that we should tend towards such dishes.

"As spring approaches," she said, "we begin to yearn for fresh foods which have been rather scarce in the long winter season. In summer we want even lighter and more easily digested things and they are certainly better for our systems."

Miss Lee expressed her approval of the system of Professor Thurman B. Rice of the Indiana school of medicine, who advocates plenty of ice cream for the growing child.

PRAISES ICE CREAM

"Ice cream used to be considered as a knickknack of very questionable standard as a healthful food," Miss Lee said. "Now every hospital that can afford it serves ice cream at least once a day.

"Of course it's good, why not? Milk, sugar, egg, cornstarch and a dash of flavoring! It couldn't be anything but good food so long as the ingredients aren't spoiled and freezing is the best way to keep them from spoiling."

For the benefit of the ladies eager to learn new tricks in the culinary art, Miss Lee devoted the greater part of her interesting talk to the preparing of carefully planned dishes which she calculated would appeal to any husband.

Bond patty cakes, creamed [illegible] shoulder, banana bran muffins, chicken of the sea a la king and cranberry parfait are but a few of the delicious dishes prepared by Miss Lee and her capable assistant, Mrs. Mary Richardson.

PRIZES AWARDED

At the conclusion of Miss Lee's talk, several valuable prizes including the very tasty delicacies prepared by the experienced instructor, were awarded to lucky ticket holders.

Included in the group of winners were Hattie Waterhouse, Palfrey road; K. M. Cartwright, Banks street; William A. Machem, Mrs. E. J. Corrigan, Stella road; Frances Smith, Oakland street; Mrs. E. G. Switzer, Belmont street; Mrs. G. E. Sullivan, Common street; Mrs. Dan O'Connell, Palfrey road; Mrs. Stuart Eisen, Belmont street; Mabel Bell, Pine street; Harriet M. Fish, Hurd road; May McKissick, Willow street, and Mrs. Fred Winters, Belmont street.

Other winners were: Helen L. Dalton, Cutler street; Mrs. George Rutledge, Bellevue road; Mrs. Chester Warren, Brookfield road, Waltham; Mrs. Edgar Patterson, Warwick road; Mrs. E. J. Ross, Warwick road, Watertown; Mrs. C. I. Spencer, Jeanette avenue; Jessie L. Higgins, Brookfield road, Watertown; Mrs. A. J. Weichel, Waverly Oaks road, Waltham; A. J. 8000 Dockhands In South Strike

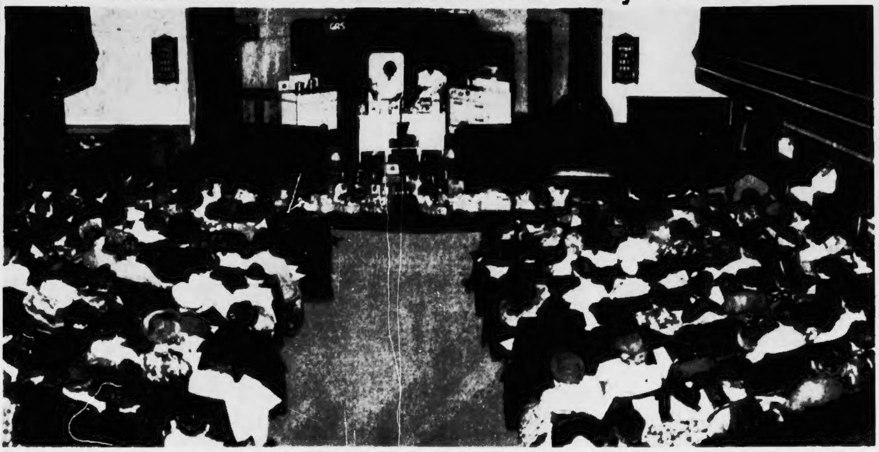
JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 16 (AP)—A strike of longshoremen intended to paralyze the waterfronts of coastal cities between Wilmington, N. C., and Tampa, Fla., became effective today.

Officials of the International Longshoremen's Association said about 8000 men, mostly Negro dock workers, had voted to quit their jobs to enforce demands for higher pay, an eight-hour day and time and a half for overtime.

Arctic Museum

MOSCOW (AP)—The most northerly museum in the world is being established by a Russian expedition at Rudolf Island in the Franz Josef Land archipelago, north of Nova Zembla.

Belmont Wives Learn Culinary Secrets



Belmont housewives were eager listeners and attentive students when Miss Martha Lee, noted culinary expert of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser, gave one of her famous cooking school demonstrations at the First Methodist Church. On a raised dais Miss Lee set up a ministure kitchen and then initiated her rapt listeners into the secrets that make food delicious and its preparation a delight. Photo shows Miss Lee, assisted by Mrs. Ray Clark, addressing the more than 200 wives who attended the lecture. At the foot of the dais may be seen the baskets of food which were won by lucky ladies in the assemblage.

The Brighter Side

About all we know about the stock market is that somebody comes along in one of your unluckier moments and tells you that while they never give tips on the market, you had better buy yourself a piece of This and that, Inc., because a certain fellow who knows what is going on, told them . . .

Damon Runyon

Well, anyway, you buy yourself a piece of This and that, Inc., at, say, ten dollars per share, and the next you hear of it, Thisandthat, Inc., is not worth the price of having your head examined, and you secretly cherish animosity against the fellow who gave you the tip until death us do part.

Probably the fellow meant all right at that. Probably he was just trying to do you a favor. It is even money that he himself went for a gob on Thisandthat, Inc. But were it a penal offense for any person to suggest to another, directly or indirectly, the placing of a dollar in the stock market, this would be a better world. There should be an additional and extra heavy penalty when the tip is accompanied by the advice:

"Just throw that stock in a box and forget it awhile."

"FORGOTTEN" BILLIONS

It is estimated that the stock thrown in boxes that the owners have been trying to forget represents at face value several billions of dollars, but only about the price of an old wool hat in actual cash at the moment.

So that is about all we know about the stock market and we have no complaint against it, except that we have recently discovered that the stock market is contributing too greatly to the unhappiness of our fellow citizens.

We were in and out of a dozen business establishments on Broadway and Fifth avenue the other day, including a tailor's, a haberdasher's, a hat store, a candy shoppe, a jeweler's, and a ticket broker's, more because the owners and clerks are old friends that we liked to keep in touch with than anything else, and everywhere we went we asked:

"How's business?"

USUAL KNOCKS

Business, they said, is off. A couple of our friends put in the usual knocks on the weather, which was too hot, or too cold, we have forgotten which, but most of them said the stock market is responsible for business being off. Their customers are getting patted around in the market and don't have time, inclination or money to buy things.

Thus the market is responsible for much unhappiness. The business men are unhappy. Their customers are unhappy. The wives and children of same are unhappy, especially the wives. We are unhappy, because our friends are unhappy. It is a most unhappy situation all the way around, and what makes us unhappier than anything else is that we can suggest no solution.

We might say that the stock market ought to be wiped off the face of the earth, but if that were done, it would only add to the general unhappiness. A lot of our friends work around the stock market, and they would be unhappy if they lost their jobs. A lot of our friends love to gamble in the stock market, and if deprived of that simple pleasure they would be most unhappy, indeed.

BETTER OR WORSE

So, there is really nothing we can do about the matter. The market may get better later on. There is also the chance that it may get worse. One thing about the market that you can go to sleep on is the certainty that it is going to get better or worse.

We have been inquiring around trying to find out what is the matter with the market, but nobody seems to know. Everybody is lower. That is, everybody who plays the market. Nobody knows why.

That is another thing about the market—everybody always knows why they win, which is because they are smart at the right time, but nobody ever knows why they lose. It never is because they are not smart, you may be sure of that.

THRILL OF A BET

We have sometimes been criticized in home circles for making an occasional bet on a horse race or wagering that we can make a certain number with a pair of dice. We realize this comes under the head of gambling, and gambling is something we cannot conscientiously recommend to anyone. It is a deplorable weakness.

Nevertheless, we recall now the thrill we got out of the last bet we made on a horse race. It was at Saratoga in August and our choice was licked by just an ugly proboscis, as the boys say. Just thinking of that race has made us miss three typewriter keys, hand running.

And the last time we wagered we could make a certain point with a pair of dice . . . at that same Saratoga, in the Chicago Club and the [illegible] our number for us [illegible] then rolled it [illegible] a pleasure!

"HEAT" ON AT HOME

We joke, of course, but we got a big belt out of the losing just the same, so when the heat in home circles over our unfortunate tendency gets too strong, we mildly but meanly inquire:

"What is the market today on that stock you bought last winter and put in the box to forget?"

Hospital Probe Action Looms

WESTBORO, Oct. 16—Criminal charges, based on alleged incompetence and waste at the State Hospital here, were hinted today by State Auditor Thomas H. Buckley.

Probing the reported disappearance of approximately $7000 in vegetables and dairy products raised at the hospital farm, the state auditor said that several of those in high position may be drawn in as the investigation continues.

At the same time, investigations by the state police and state department of mental diseases are being pressed.

His probe is concerned chiefly with the financial extravagance allegedly revealed in an audit of the books, said Buckley, but indicated criminal action may be brought later.

Investigation so far has shown "general incompetent management," he stated.

Some of the aggravations already disclosed, he said, are that inmates at the hospital have been forced to pay $1 for haircuts while barber equipment worth $1075 has been lying idle in the cellar several years.

He also found that the milk served patients is never analyzed, that worms have been found in soup served inmates, and that the pigs showed evidence of paratyphoid.

"We have found that both Steward Perley Wiley and Head Farmer Raymond Whitney have been managing their departments incompetently," said the State Auditor.

A key figure in the case, whom he declined to name, has already tendered his resignation, said Dr. Walter E. Lang, hospital superintendent. Others may follow, he indicated.

The American will appreciate a report from any reader who finds misrepresentation of facts in its Used Car ads.

Pope's Sympathy For Germans

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy, Oct. 16 (AP)—Pope Pius expressed sympathy for "the sufferings" of German Catholics.

The pontiff's statement was made while he spoke to a group of pilgrims, among whom were 22 Germans from Duesseldorf.

"When one speaks of the German Rhineland," he said, "Everyone knows one is speaking of something important, especially in these times, something which is partly deplorable and partly consoling.

"Everyone knows in fact how much members of the Mystic Body of Christ suffer in Germany, and particularly in that part of Germany which is called the Rhineland and in the city of Dusseldorf.

"But on the other hand, everyone knows that those courageous sons can depend on the support of the Catholic Church in Germany and the Rhineland."

Butler, Maid Quit Mansion

GOSHEN, N. Y., Oct. 16 (AP)—The spacious mansion of the late Mrs. Frederick DePeyster Foster, focus of a $1,200,000 will contest, was empty today of its butler turned master and its mistress-maid.

The former servants, William Lowe, 42, and Olivia Olsen, 33, who contend Mrs. Foster left them her fortune in a will made shortly before her death, vacated the home on advice of their counsel, former Supreme Court Justice Lynch.

"Now that a temporary administrator has been appointed, the servants prefer to be released from responsibility," Lynch explained.

The house, although they had no funds to maintain it, had become the fortress of the servants during court battles with wealthy Tuxedo Park residents who were made beneficiaries in a will drawn by Mrs. Foster in July, 1932, five years before her death.

New War Opens On Mutuels

The opening of actual hostilities in the long-smouldering warfare against pari-mutuel betting in Massachusetts was in view today following the filing of a petition yesterday at the attorney-general's office.

The petition seeks to repeal the act legalizing betting and was signed by 10 citizens headed by Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell, president emeritus of Harvard University, and including Rev. Dr. C. Gordon Brownville, Charles C. Cabot of Dover, Godfrey L. Cabot of Boston, Henry Lee, Andrew B. Wallace of Springfield, Edward Kimball of Springfield, Henry Parkman, Jr., and John L. Feeney of Cambridge.

An additional 20,000 signatures must be obtained to put the matter before the Legislature.

The Man Who Walked With Ghosts; Cochrane Returns

DURING THE LATE, LAMENTED WORLD SERIES Mickey Cochrane held cheerful court in the lobbies of New York hotels, on the ramps of the ball stadiums, and in the sheepruns of the subways. Life was a repetitious round of handclasps and enquires about his health. "Fine," said Mike, flashing a stereotyped grin, "fine." It seemed a monotonous round of well-wishing for one so recently emerged from convalescence and the shadow of tragedy. I said so.

AUSTEN LAKE

"No," said Mike, "it's great to feel alive. I might have been a ghost at this series. Ghosts can't shake hands."

Ghosts? Tragic fatalities of the sport field? Yes, sport has had its victims and, but for happy accident, Mike might have been added to the mournful role when Bump Hadley's sail ball fractured his skull last summer . . .

Doom in the Yale Bowl

THERE WAS THAT BRISK OCTOBER afternoon in 1931. Overlooking the Yale Bowl the sun was setting behind the brown shale cliff called West Rock. A husky Army tackle lifted the kick-off far down-field to the Yale fullback. A swarm of white-helmeted Yales formed interference as he raced up the field—15, 20, 25 yards. Swiftly, from an oblique angle a lithe cadet end left his feet and struck the Yale carrier's leather knee-caps with a sickening thud. Referee Eddie O'Brien's whistle shrilled and the Yale man rose but the lithe cadet lay convulsed with his features blackening. Stretcher bearers, shrieking ambulance sirens and an emergency operation at the New Haven Hospital, while the Yale fullback, Bob Lassiter, waited in an anteroom to give his blood, if a transfusion should be necessary.

And thus young Richard Brinsley Sheridan, nephew of a famous Civil War general, died, throwing a shroud of horror over the game—football's most shocking fatality.

Death in a Ball Yard

A HOT SEPTEMBER SUN BORE on the Yankee Stadium in 1920. The Yankees and Cleveland Indians were fighting for the pennant and Ray Chapman, sensational Cleveland shortstop, was at bat. On the mound, the squat, powerful figure of Carl Mays moistening his glove and squinting at the finger signals of his catcher. Satisfied, he wound his arms behind his head, stooping with a characteristic underhand motion as he delivered the pitch. The count was three balls and two strikes as Chapman leaned expectantly to meet a pitch which "must" be down the alley. Something happened. The ball struck the batter squarely on his left temple and he slumped to the ground. The Yankee catcher stripped off his mask and beckoned the trainer. Players ran from both dugouts. But Chapman was already beyond help. He died on his way to the Physicians and Surgeons Hospital, a martyr to baseball's saddest tragedy.

Fight Fatality in the Garden

THE DAZZLING RING LIGHTS SPREAD their brilliance over the crowded floor of the Madison Square Garden in winter of 1933. Gusts of tobacco smoke caught the updrafts and eddied toward the overhead blowers. A sea of faces peered from the surrounding gloom as a monstrosity of a man stamped out of a roped corner and faced a smaller, thickset youth with blond hair and a strong chin. The blond youth goes down under a bludgeoning of the giant's fists and lies quivering on the floor. The referee tolls the count and a bucket crew climbs through the rope strands to snap ammonia bombs under their fallen fighter's nose. A state physician places a stethescope on the unconscious man's chest and gives a sharp command. Ring swipes and managers trundle the youth away to the locker room and thence to the hospital, while the jubilant giant dances a victory shuffle. And thus Ernie Schaaf passed away, victim of a brain hemorrhage and Primo Carnera was momentarily banned as an over-sized "dreadnaught" type by the New York State commission. It was boxing's most noted and pathetic tragedy.

Two Who Came From the Shadow

IT WAS MID-WINTER OF 1934 AND the souptureen galleries of the Boston Garden were jammed with overcoated people. On the oval-shaped rink twelve men in gawdy hockey woolens nudged a rubber disc with hooked sticks. Bald Eddie Shore, scudding at express speed collides with Ace Bailey and the Toronto forward crashes headlong to the ice. Players, the crowd and police intermingle in mad swirls while Bailey is carried away to the City Hospital to lie, twixt life and death for weeks—his skull fractured and requiring repeated trepannings and delicate bone borings. And happily he recovered to save hockey from a major fatality, though since then reoccurrent swoons and upsets have laid him low.

"It's great to feel alive," Mike had said, "Ghosts can't shake hands."

There was a striking similarity in the result of Bailey and Cochrane head injuries, each receiving a multiple fracture and lying for weeks in the sombre shadow. Each ended his active career with the accident and each came back to the scene of his tragedy afterward to receive the handclasps of well wishers and repeat "Fine. Just Fine" to enquiries after their health.

Tars 10-8 Choice; Reserves, Punting Crimson Worries

Harlow May Be Forced to Unveil Sophomore Star, MacDonald

By BILL GRIMES

BALTIMORE, Oct. 16—Harvard and Navy come to the cross roads of their season this afternoon in Municipal Stadium, where more than 50,000 enthusiasts will be gathered to watch today's football classic of the East.

The Middies are slightly favored over the Crimson. There have been few instances of betting, and the few quotations gave the Sailors the edge, the prices ranging from 10-8 to 5-4.

Harvard and Navy are numbered among the unbeaten, untied college elevens. However, neither has been really tested this season.

SHY ON RESERVES

Whatever chance Harvard has of beating Navy depends almost entirely on the ability of Vernon Struck, "Chief" Boston and Cliff Wilson to play through the entire conflict.

Although the other members of the team are important cogs in the Harvard machine, Struck, Boston and Wilson are the key men. Moreover, Coach Harlow has no replacements of sufficient ability to spell for any one of this trio.

The squad statistics show that Navy, as a team, averages less than a pound heavier than Harvard. Yet it's a well known fact that the Crimson will spot the Sailors many pounds.

Moreover, Coach "Ham" Hardwick has on hand an over abundance of talent available, especially tackles, guards and backs.

ALLEN'S LEG SORE

Like Harvard, Navy has two of its stars on the hospital list, Bill Ingram 2d, and Wallace, the first-string center.

Rumors have been current that Ingram will see service against the Crimson. He had some muscles torn during the Virginia game and has not had any contact work for a week.

He's the best all around back at Crabtown but, as is the case in many other positions, Navy has a remarkably fine substitute for Ingram in Len Cooke, who is not only a great ball carrier and strong defensively but a fine kicker.

Dick Harlow would not have been quite so jittery this morning if he was sure his charges would be able to hold up their end against the Navy kickers.

Capt. Russ Allen will drop out of his guard position and do the punting until such a time as his leg goes dead on him. Then Frank Foley, a former Boston Latin School boy, will get the nod.

Harvard will be represented by the best drilled squad that has worn the Crimson in many years. Harlow has pointed for this game and if successful will hang up his first major victory at Harvard.

His charges tied Princeton a year ago and lost to Yale by one point, and those occasions were the closest that Harlow came to a win against big time competition.

MacDONALD'S DAY?

In the two previous games Harlow resorted to but two formations, a single wing back to the right or left with an unbalanced line and a straight kick formation. His attacks have been spinners and reverses and some cleverly executed aerial thrusts.

A year ago Harlow sprang a double shift on Princeton and bewildered the Tigers.

There's a strong suspicion that he has something up his sleeve for this afternoon. He has pointed for Navy, and therefore he'll open up in order to accomplish his objective.

It may come to pass that Harlow will turn "Torb" MacDonald loose this afternoon. Since he came up to the varsity, MacDonald has seen very little service, despite the fact that he rates high with Coach Harlow.

He's a triple threat of far more than average ability, and it might so happen that this Malden youngster will steal the show this afternoon. At any rate, he'll be well worth watching.

Zimman Starts Against Bates At Oval

Lew Manly was expected to start his regular Tufts eleven against Bates this afternoon at the Tufts Oval despite the ailments of several of the first string players.

Captain Harold Zimman, who has been suffering from a charley horse, has managed to get into scrimmages each day this week, and insists he is fit to start.

The Jumbos are given a one-touchdown edge as they meet their old rivals from Maine.

Coach Manly has greatly improved Tufts' pass-defense this week.

George Morin, ace of the Bates backfield, will receive plenty of attention from the Tufts players and every possible attempt to bottle him up will be made.

The Lewistonians were badly beaten by both Dartmouth and New Hampshire, but their decisive victory over Arnold last Saturday brought them new hope.

KILEY PICKS CRUSADERS

30,000 See Intersectional Battle With Georgia At Fenway Today—Osmanski Cynosure

By WALTER KILEY

A second Civil War, this one being waged on Yankee soil, is touched off at Fenway Park this afternoon as the Georgia Bulldogs from the Land of Dixie open fire on the northerners of Holy Cross in what is anticipated as the most awesome intersectional gridiron spectacle of this New England season.

These history-making skirmishes between the South's Robert E. Lee and the North's William Tecumseh Sherman were, in retrospect, mere powder puff tiffs beside this epic struggle for survival among the undefeated which is luring more than 30,000 insatiable spectators to the safe vantage point of the grandstand.

In place of the inadequate weapons of the other grim struggle, the long barreled, single shot musket and the carbine, the Georgians come equipped with powerful and modern implements of warfare, giant howitzers and crushing tanks in the shape of a mammoth line averaging better than 205 pounds, with machine gun fire and all its deadliness in the form of innumerable backs of infested speed.

GEORGIA'S RECORD

A year ago, the Bulldogs invaded New York, and with a force which suffered by comparison with the 1937 reinforcements, held the far-famed Fordham machine to a 7—7 deadlock, the latter subsequently surviving a 0—0 issue with Pittsburgh, which in turn went out and captured Rose Bowl honors.

Down in Athens, Ga., way where the Bulldogs make their university homes, the good folks who cultivate their pecan crops and their tobacco and take pot shots at the quail in the swamp brushlands, sent their Bulldogs up North with the advice to beat this Holy Cross team by no fewer than three touchdowns.

But fortunately the Crusaders of Holy Cross don't phase easily.

With lethal weapons of their own, with their fighting spirit aroused to concert pitch, with their personnel healed and well and showing none of the scars of previous battles, the Knights in Purple feel that the even money quotation on the game is nothing short of disrespectful to them.

Captain Bob Mautner, as truly great a center as ever played the game on either side of the Mason-Dixon line, says he'll match his Bill Osmanski, his Lonnie Cahill, his Henry Ouilette and Hilary Rens with Captain "Wild Bill" Hartman, Oliver Hunnicut, or Vassa Cate, Georgia's devastating backs.

He says, too, that he'll take his Purple line outweighed as it will be, to all the Quinton Lumpkins, Pete Tinsleys and others who are being groomed for All-America berths.

It is unfortunate for Holy Cross that Captain Mautner won't start and may not play.

The big fellow is ready but Dr. Eddie Anderson, his coach, feels that it would be better to use Jim Bowman today, rather than risk further injury to an already seriously aggravated condition and perhaps thereby lose Mautner for the rest of the campaign.

From a purely local aspect, our Boston folks are more than a bit interested in the fortunes of "Bombardier" Osmanski, who looms to be just about tops in a fullback role.

Osmanski has never played in this city, but a legend is fast being woven about his spectacular ball carrying, his brilliant completion of passes, his speed and powerful drive.

In the Bombardier the Purple stands its finest chance to boast an All-America of its own in many a long campaign.

It's history now how he ripped wide open first one, then another game a year ago, how he almost single handedly bested Georgetown a week ago, tallying all four of the Purple touchdowns.

We've seen big lines in college football but none which can touch the Georgians. And seldom have we heard two rival coaches promise to throw defensive caution to the four winds, to go high, wide and handsome in their scoring efforts.

Being a good Northerner and loyal to the best traditions, we'll take Holy Cross to win today, thank you.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 16 (AP)—Dartmouth's veteran footballers figured to have little trouble today as they faced a Brown team which was made up largely of sophomores because of injuries to key players.

Nine veterans were in the Dartmouth starting lineup, compared to seven or eight sophomores on whom Brown had to rely.

Terriers Picked At 8-5 to Top Clarkson

By MURRAY KRAMER

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Oct. 16—Undefeated Boston University hopes to chalk up its third straight victory of the season here this afternoon against Clarkson Tech.

This battle is the second of a home and home series which was inaugurated last fall in Boston where the Terriers downed the Engineers 14 to 7.

Despite the closeness of last year's game, the Terriers are 8 to 5 favorites to triumph today because of their impressive record against Lehigh and Slippery Rock.

The Engineers, after leading Syracuse in their opening game, faded in the last half to allow the Orangemen to win easily, and last Saturday the Potsdam eleven was defeated by Niagara.

The Terriers will start their regular lineup. Coach Pat Hanley has not scouted the Engineers this year, while Clarkson has watched Boston University in both games it has played.

Lou Blaszynski, who tallied five touchdowns in the last two games, will continue his siege for individual scoring honors, while Nechtem, who has an average of eight yards for every time he has carried the ball, has high hopes of equalling or improving on that mark.

Irish Fullbacks Out of Tech Test

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 16 (AP)—Notre Dame today bemoaned the loss of its two mightiest fullbacks as it awaited the 15th annual football clash with Carnegie Tech.

Coach Elmer Layden left at home Mario Tonelli, who started last week against Illinois, and Ed Simonich.

Layden indicated he would use Joe Thesing, a sophomore from Cincinnati, who has never played in a college football game.

A crowd of 50,000 is expected.

Billy Sandow Writes Marshall Challenge | Charley Adams in Wilson Tribute

By JACK CONWAY

I HAVE RECEIVED from Billy Sandow, manager of Everett Marshall, a copy of a letter which he sent to Paul Bowser. In a brief letter to me, Sandow says:

"Although I am not familiar with the policy of the Boston Evening American on the matter of the heavyweight wrestling championship, I feel that in justice to Everett Marshall, who is an American boy, that the copy of my letter to Paul Bowser should be made public."

This newspaper has not any policy in regard to the heavyweight wrestling champion. I presume the sports pages would still go to press on time if there was not such a thing as a heavyweight wrestling championship.

Sandow is probably worrying about what treatment his challenge in behalf of Everett Marshall will receive. I can assure Sandow he will receive a fair deal which is all he has any right to expect. I know of many managers of wrestlers and boxers who do not believe they receive fair treatment unless they get 95 per cent the best of everything.

Sandow will be remembered as a former manager of Strangler Lewis. He was at one time considered the top man in the wrestling game.

Sandow Claims Marshall Is Champion

SANDOW, very naturally, claims Marshall is the world's heavyweight champion. Sandow would be a very poor manager if he failed to insist his man was the class of the heavyweights.

Here is Sandow's letter to Bowser which he is so anxious to get into print:

"You have always been acknowledged a real sportsman by the press and the public of your city, who have always also credited you with being a fair-minded promoter. If such is the case, why then have you persistently refused to bring the real world's champion—Everett Marshall—into your city against your self-styled champions, the Roberts, the Caseys, the O'Mahoneys, the Clarks and the Don Georges?

"Marshall is the undisputed heavyweight wrestling champion of the world. He won the title in the ring and will defend it in the ring. Why, then, won't you give him a chance to show the Boston public that he is the greatest athlete on the mat?

"You yourself called O'Mahony the world champion when he defeated Londos and George in succession. Shikat defeated O'Mahony. Ali Baba won from Shikat twice and Marshall defeated Ali Baba. Is Marshall not then the world wrestling champion?

"Prior to Marshall's victory over Ali Baba in Columbus, Ohio in June, 1936 a certain group of promoters had attempted to disqualify Ali Baba in a match in Newark, N. J., with a fifth rate wrestler going by the name of Dave Levin, whose real name is George Wenzel. And although Ali Baba pinned "Levin" a number of times, the referee disqualified the champion for an alleged foul.

"All this was investigated by the New Jersey commission and the referee's decision was reversed—and justly so—Ali Baba still retained his title and later lost it to Marshall. Thus making Marshall the real world champion by succession.

"Such great states like Illinois, Missouri, Texas, Michigan, Indiana, Colorado, Ohio, Alabama, Tennessee, Georgia, Louisiana and many others are recognizing Marshall as the real world's champion and he defends his title against anyone he is asked to meet.

"Why then is he not entitled to show himself before the Boston public? Why then have you turned a deaf ear to his requests for matches in Boston? Why in the name of real sportsmanship do you bar Champion Everett Marshall?

"In conclusion I can say that besides Marshall I have several wrestlers, who I know can take all your so-called champions. If you are a real sport, you will answer me. I await your reply."

Charles F. Adams Lauds Wilson

CHARLES F. ADAMS, president of Suffolk Downs, was prevented by business in Washington from attending the dinner to Dave Wilson, handicap champion for 1937 at the Club Mayfair. Adams, however, sent a telegram to James Linnehan, capable superintendent of the East Boston track, in which he expressed his admiration of Wilson. Adams' telegram follows:

"I must regret my inability to attend the Wilson banquet and in person to express to him my appreciation of the interest and long hours he has given in support of New England racing, and particularly his co-operation and friendly interest in Suffolk Downs. In behalf of our officials and management, please extend to Mr. Wilson my best wishes and the above sentiment."

James Linnehan and other Suffolk Downs executives were among those persons who attended the dinner to Wilson.

STEVE CASEY and Tor Johnson have been unable to agree on a referee for their finish mat bout which will be held at the Garden on October 26 . . . Miss Daniels Retires Copley Plaza Trophy

Rides Erin's Son to Third Straight Victory

Matinee and evening performances will be given today as the 10th annual 110th Cavalry horse show enters its third day of competition at Commonwealth Armory.

Juveniles will feature the afternoon riding, with many of last year's blue ribbon winners entered.

Feature of the session will be the A. S. P. C. A. Good Hands event.

"Society and Hunt Team Night" will be celebrated tonight. A colorful list of classes has been arranged, but it is doubtful if it will exceed in interest that produced last night.

A near capacity gathering of more than 3000 spectators attended the performance, feature of which was the retirement of the Copley Plaza challenge trophy by Jeanne Daniels of Worcester.

Miss Daniels rode Erin's Son, owned by Mr. and Mrs. William J. Kennedy of Southboro, to its third consecutive triumph in the Ladies' Hunters, automatically retiring the trophy.

It marked the third successive year that Miss Daniels has ridden the chestnut gelding to the blue.

The Dale McDonald Challenge trophy, presented by Marion Alberton, was awarded in the class for Ladies' Saddle Horses to Bellmire Kitty, entered by Mr. and Mrs. Reed A. Albee and ridden by Mrs. Albee.

War Admiral Ready for Racing

By The Associated Press

Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' Signalman apparently is nearing the form that earned him the right to match strides a few years back with such turf titans as Cavalcade and Time Supply. Making his second start since returning to competition following a two-year layoff, the big son of High Cloud turned in his second victory at Jamaica yesterday. He set all the pace and ran six furlongs in 1:12 3-5 to pay 3 to 1.

There will be no supplementary closing of entries for the $50,000 challenge cup and $20,000 Flamingo stakes at Hialeah Park this year. This is a new idea for the Florida track, for in the past horsemen have been allowed to make an entry after their charges had shown good form. Under the new ruling, all entries must be in by November 15.

Maryland racing fans would like to see a match race between Yancey Christmas' Rough Time and A. C. Compton's Congendaal at like weights over six furlongs. Both have accounted for some of the fastest sprint times of the year and are as fit now as hands can make horses. H. Guy Bedwell, trainer of Congendaal, believes that the Compton horse can defeat the Grand Time gelding but under only one condition—that there is no delay at the post. Rough Time is an almost perfect post actor while Congendaal cuts up and sometimes wears himself out before the barrier is sprung.

Trainer George Phillips of Dewitt Page's Maemere farm has purchased the contract of Apprentice Jockey E. Delpino from J. D. Mooney.

Paul Ryan, one of the year's leading riders, has left Laurel for Bay Meadows, Cal., where he hopes his luck will change. He was none too successful in Maryland, riding only one winner.

War Admiral, unbeaten king of the three-year-olds, will not be a starter in the Laurel Stakes tomorrow, but he'll probably go in an overnight event Monday. The son of Man o' War worked out again yesterday, stepping a half-mile in 49 2-5 seconds.

Long shots shared the spotlight with favorites in the feature events yesterday. Half Time, owned and trained by Milo Shields, won at 6 to 1 at Jamaica for his first victory since May 5. The Tranquility Farms' Alice G. made good in the role of the favorite at Laurel, paying $6.40, while Anita Doris' Mixwell captured the six-furlong top event at Rockingham Park to return $5.80 for $2.

Marica, the swift running filly from Thomas D. Taggart's French Lick Springs stable, has proved her superiority over Mrs. John D. Hertz's Count Arthur. The pair met in the mile and a quarter of the Breeders' Stake at Keeneland yesterday and the filly emerged victorious by the slim margin of a neck to pay $4.20 as the outsider. The victory was Marica's eighth in 12 races this year. She has finished back of second only once and that in the Hawthorne Cup when she wound up sixth.

Quinn Plans 'Gansett Race Meet, Bars O'Hara

Monday was concerned came the announcement today by Lou Smith, managing director of Rockingham Park, Salem, N. H., that races would be held there on Monday.

This contradicted reports that Rockingham would close if Gansett held racing on Monday. Smith said:

"Rockingham Park will hold races Monday. We will continue our three-week meeting until we receive official notice that racing is to be held elsewhere in New England.

"There are more than 800 thoroughbreds on the grounds here and scores of other horses are on their way from Toronto, New York and Maryland.

"We asked for and received an extension of dates simply because the horsemen, most of whom filled out their itineraries for the year last spring, petitioned us to that effect.

"WAR COUNCIL" MEETS

"It is a confusing state of affairs, but we are left with no alternative. We were forced to take entries this morning, and, having committed ourselves to the horsemen we are naturally forced to run on Monday."

The current "Rock" meeting was originally scheduled to end today.

But hitting back at Smith in a definite quarrel between the two New England tracks was a statement by William L. Ames, director of the Narragansett Racing Association, who has been making preparations for the opening of the track on Monday.

"The Narragansett Racing Association has a license to conduct a fall meeting opening Monday," Ames said in reply to Smith. "We are taking entries and are making accommodations for 1200 horses.

"O'Hara is in New York and already has pledges of co-operation from the leading stables and horsemen.

"We expect Rockingham to close just as soon as we run the first race on Monday in keeping with the terms of the extension granted the New Hampshire Jockey Club."

It was learned that two plans for the opening of Gansett were discussed by Governor Quinn and his "war council." One was that the Governor and Lieutenant Governor Raymond E. Jordan would have control of track operations along with Thomas A. Harrop, secretary of the Rhode Island racing division. Harrop, according to the proposed plan, would be acting general manager in place of deposed O'Hara.

The second plan called for the creation of a three-man committee to operate the track.

This committee would include Judge James E. Dooley, vice-president of the Narragansett Racing Assn., Albert H. Daly, prominent Providence citizen, and a third man, named by O'Hara, but subject to the approval of Governor Quinn.

QUINN STANDS FIRM

It was doubtful, according to informed racing and political circles here, whether O'Hara would accept any "plan" proposed by the Governor which called for his ousting as president and general manager.

But Governor Quinn stood firm on his previous declaration that Narragansett Park would not open Monday "or at any other time under the present management as long as I am governor."

His declaration came even as workmen removed the shutters at the Pawtucket horse plant in preparation for the scheduled start of the Fall meeting Monday.

SET TO USE MILITIA

The Governor was reported ready to employ the state police, the militia and deputy sheriffs to enforce his demands that O'Hara be ousted.

He will base his action on an 1893 Supreme Court decision to the effect that the state's chief executive is answerable for anything he may do to the people only.

Under this ruling, Quinn does not have to abide by judicial or legislative orders of any sort.

Close friends pointed out that his move would in effect not be a violation of the Supreme Court quashing order because that was directed against the state racing commission.

Quinn, it was declared, will act independently of the commission under his powers as governor.

MAY NAME NEW BOARD

According to informed quarters, the governor is also considering seriously the appointment of an entire new racing commission, which will immediately bring new charges against the racing man and the association.

This move would be predicated on the fact that the Supreme Court decision was based on the refusal of Chairman Francis J. Kiernan to remove himself as a member of the body that heard the old charges.

Failure of the court to touch upon the merit of the old charges leaves the way open for further litigation by the commission.

Meanwhile O'Hara declared that he did not know how the Governor intended to enforce his "unlawful order," but said:

"We will operate until such enforcement reaches the phase of jeopardizing the safe-being of the citizens of this state."

QUINN GETS SUPPORT

Referring to Quinn's continued opposition, he asserted:

"We recognize and respect law and order. One order from the court is and should be of more weight than a regiment of militia."

Meanwhile Quinn rallied to his banner various Democratic organizations throughout "Little Rhody" which passed resolutions last night endorsing his stand.

This move was said to have been taken to prepare a defense against possible impeachment action, the only method of reprisal against gubernatorial acts under the 1893 ruling.

Following these preliminary skirmishes, the climaxing moves in the long political and legal game of chess centered about the Pawtucket track will come Monday, when the gates are thrown open.

O'HARA IN DRIVER'S SEAT

O'Hara, observers said, now holds a decided advantage and only by a determined attack can the governor regain his lost ground and avoid defeat in the form of the track's opening.

Quinn ordered all leaves withdrawn for the 75 members of the state police force.

At the same time he prepared to take advantage of a new law enforcement agency, hitherto controlled by the enemy, the Providence County sheriff's office.

LINES UP SHERIFFS

With the ousting of High Sheriff Philip E. Quinn, an O'Hara ally and now the racing man's personal bodyguard, several weeks ago, Governor Quinn gained control of the department.

Opposed to this imposing array, the O'Hara strategists will have the Pawtucket police force of 40 men, many of whose leaves were also cancelled last night.

MAILS OUT PASSES

O'Hara and his advisers convened at the Hotel Biltmore, while the governor and his aids spent long hours in the State House.

First results of the confabs came from O'Hara with the announcement that 25,000 passes for Monday's scheduled running had been put in the mails, and all employes of the Narragansett Association were ordered to report to work today.

Kelley Cocky As He Trains For Lou

Ray Kelley, Brookline battler, now is confident of victory in his fight with [illegible] Lou Brouillard, Worcester, for the New England light-heavyweight championship over the 12-round route, feature of the Goodwin A. C. boxing show at the Boston Garden next Friday night.

"A lot of people are doing much more worrying about this fight than I am," said Kelley today as he knocked off work in a Wealthy Town meat market and headed for the gymnasium.

"Some of my friends tell me I might have waited a little while before picking on such a tough proposition as Brouillard, but I'm tired of popping over opponents in preliminary ranks.

"There were similar moans about Dick Maloney when he stepped in with Max Marek, but I notice Maloney was thumping Marek around until his eye was split accidentally.

"I'll do the same with Brouillard, and nothing but a similar accident can stop me from beating Lou and taking the N. E. light-heavyweight crown.

"I realize I'm spotting Brouillard plenty in experience but he's giving away reach and height and that makes it all even in my book.

"I know how to fight southpaws and have seen Brouillard so often I know his style from start to finish," Kelley concluded.

A few months ago you might have said Kelley was talking through his hat with such potent remarks. But Kelley has built up plenty of respect for himself and his fighting ability with a brilliant summer campaign.

He climaxed a whirlwind rush with a knockout victory in six rounds over his bitter rival, Walter Cunningham, claimed the N. E. light-heavyweight title vacated by Tony Shucco, who has outgrown the 175-pound limit and now moves into the major bout of his career with the veteran iron-fisted Brouillard.

Ladfield Wilson's Best If He Goes in 6th Race

More at Home Over Mile—Araho Entry 'Cap Favorite

By DAVE WILSON

Selections made for fast track.

BEST BET—Ladfield, 6TH RACE

ROCKINGHAM PARK, N. H., Oct. 16—Mucho Gusto and New Deal, the entry of the Araho Stable, may run one-two in the Bennington Handicap, $5000 added feature which will be run over the mile and one-eighth route at the old Rock this afternoon.

My best bet of the day, however, is Ladfield if he is elected to start in the sixth race, a mile event. He is named, also, for the Spinning Wheel Claiming Handicap, a six furlongs sprint, but he was second to Orinoco his last out over the mile distance and is expected to start in the mile of the sixth race.

FIRST—Little Dinah, Zevanaid, Clarify

LITTLE DINAH away since July 5, needs only to duplicate brilliant trials to down inferior rivals such as he faces here. Four [illegible] in [illegible] and other trials indicate readiness. ZEVANAID, nosed out by [illegible] in last race, looms all over the main danger, although CLARIFY, if started, should prove formidable at some stage of the journey.

SECOND—I'm So Dry, Forest B, Derby Dusk

Throw out I'M SO DRY'S last race. The desperate Diamond filly was placed much too highly that day. In front of that she just missed drubbing National Air and My Goodness in an affair similar to the present. FOREST B, which finished only one and one-half lengths in back of the top selection in the above-mentioned race, figures next best in what appears to be strictly a two horse race. DERBY DUSK, fourth to Maravelo in a sprint race only a few days back, easily shapes up next best.

THIRD—Package, Billy I, Sun Abbot

PACKAGE, closing like a runaway express, came from far back to finish a fast going second to Many Moons in a swiftly run six furlongs dash only a few days back. On that race, the one-time Whitney color-bearer should find the increased route of the third number right to his measure. BILLY I, which once held a touch of class, has been well conditioned in spring races and looms all over the danger. SUN ABBOT may be [illegible] better than his dull effort of the other day would indicate.

FOURTH—My Kin, Good Omen, Ladfield

MY KIN was repeatedly blocked in the early stages of last race, but closed like a wild horse to finish second to Manaco. With better racing luck, Harvey Campbell's pet should never leave the result of the fourth in doubt. GOOD OMEN, pilfied a trifle too ambitiously in recent races, holds a world of early foot and looks all over the mare to catch. LADFIELD appears better suited in the sixth race, but has a good money chance.

FIFTH—Araho Entry, Wise Player, Hope Eternal

MUCHO GUSTO and NEW DEAL, which will run coupled as the Araho Entry, should finish one-two in the Bennington. WISE PLAYER, winner of the White Mountain Handicap and one of the most improved horses in the New England area, shapes up as the stoutest sort of a contender, despite picking up considerable poundage. HOPE ETERNAL, which nosed out NEW DEAL in last race should also prove very formidable.

SIXTH—Ladfield, Breezing Along, Moisson

LADFIELD will probably have BREEZING ALONG to head for major honors. The latter finished only a snoot head in back of the top selection in the race won by Orinoco. MOISSON, which easily drubbed Furfiber and others in last race, shapes up clearly next best.

SEVENTH—Sir Rollie, Sainted, Dian

SIR ROLLIE received a nice tightener the other day in $1600 company and appears ready to down $1,250 top—$1,000 bottoms rivals such as he faces here. SAINTED, which has been sharpened by several good sprint races, may outstay DIAN for the place. The latter drubbed The Triumvir and others in the last race.

EIGHTH—Gilbert Elston, Far Cry, Waxwing

Although GILBERT ELSTON will have Apprentice M. Stillwagon in the "irons," I just can't see anything heading the Haughton color-bearer for major honors in the nightcap. The Upset gelding finished third to Wise Will and Round Table in his last race. FAR CRY and WAXWING shape up as the main dangers. They are fancied as named.

Seabiscuit Goal $200,000 Mark

NEW YORK, Oct. 16 (AP)—Seabiscuit, champion of the handicap division from C. S. Howard's Stable, gets his chance to enter the select group of horses which have won $200,000 when he opposes eleven worthy rivals in the mile of the $7500 Laurel Stakes today.

The four-year-old son of Hard Tack, winner of eight of his last nine starts, has earned $194,255, the greater part of it since being purchased by the California sportsman for $7500 last year. He tops the 1937 list with winnings of $152,780 since January 1.

I [illegible] that Jack [illegible] from Bob Quinn [illegible] being [illegible] able baseball man [illegible] friend of Quinn. HE'S THE FELLOW WHO TIPPED BOB OFF ABOUT LOU FETTE AND JIM TURNER.

I admired the [illegible] Bees for being a smart, hustling, hard fighting ball club, but the two [illegible] made all the difference between a good fifth place and a bad last, and there must be a soft spot in Quinn's heart for this man MacCallister.

Bill McKechnie is as smart a baseball man as ever [illegible] has gone from Boston. I liked the man and the way he handled his team, but I'm not particularly sorry about his going. He'll be [illegible] in Cincinnati, he'll probably [illegible] and Boston won't lose because.

I contend now and always that in eight cases out of ten THE PLAYERS MAKE THE MANAGER.

Could Joe McCarthy have piloted the Athletics into this year's pennant? Could Connie Mack have missed with the Yankees? I think no answers both questions and with my point proved at least to my satisfaction I'll get down from the stage and make room for some one else.

NOW then to believe it or not is the question—but in any event the information is abroad that Robert Ripley will sing, of all things (WNAC) during his program this evening at 8 o'clock.

Ripley's drawings and strange facts, plus his radio speaking voice are well known to millions of Americans but his singing [illegible] may be something else again entirely.

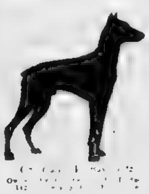
THE DOBERMANN PINSCHER
No. 4 of a Series



[illegible]

The Dobermann Pinscher takes his name from that of a German Gentleman Louis Dobermann. More than most other breeds of dogs the Dobermann gives the immediate impression of a blue-blooded animal. His ready intelligence and ability to absorb training has made him highly prized as a police and war dog [illegible] at first he was used as a guard and home watchdog. The Dobermann should have a clean cut long head and neck, powerful [illegible] almond shaped eyes, ears cropped to a point and carried erect, a deep-chested well-muscled body with long strong legs, and tail docked. Coat should be short, hard and close-lying. Color is black, brown or blue, with rust-red sharply defined markings. Height is 23-27 inches and weight is 65-75 pounds. He has been from the beginning a working dog devoted to the service of mankind.

Odd Approach Shown In His Call for Extra Session

FIND OMISSION

The legal sharps have found a queer—and they think perhaps a significant—omission in the Supreme Court decision denying the motion of Albert Levitt in the Justice Black case. It read:

"The grounds of this motion are that the appointment of Mr. Justice Black by the President and the confirmation thereof by the Senate of the United States were null and void by reason of his ineligibility . . ."

The omission was of the word "alleged" before ineligibility.

Probably just a slip.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 16—I am wondering if "Honolulu Holiday," based largely on Robert Taylor's own experience on the islands, is destined to help overcome the doubtful publicity he received on his recent trip abroad.

This is Bob's first movie after he comes back from the sensational English jaunt and no one knows better than Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer how important it is to have a picture that will counteract all the unfavorable publicity.

Tyrone Power's plane dash to New York following his broadcast this Sunday looks to me like a continuation of his romance with Janet Gaynor, which was growing hotter and hotter before the little Gaynor left for the east.

Tyrone's excuse is important radio business. Well maybe it is, but it's going to take a lot of convincing to make us believe that Mrs. Gaynor's daughter isn't the attraction. And don't tell, but I hear on excellent authority that Janet is all set for Melanie in "Gone With the Wind."

Charlie Chaplin has been rehearsing dance numbers for his new picture at dinner parties these fall evenings. He really can dance like a faun and always adds his dance interpretation to his favorite Hamlet recitation.

Speaking of Charlie, Paulette Goddard is still in New York, and I am told she was very upset over the statement issued by David Selznick on "Gone With the Wind." The fact remains that she was taking dramatic lessons and the Selznick organization was reported to have paid for these and other lessons which were supposed to teach Paulette the intricacies of the southern dialect.

Wee Star's 'Heidi' Due Thursday; Yacht Club Boys on Stage

The Metropolitan theater starts off its new fall season of bigger and better stage and screen shows next Thursday with an unbeatable box-office combination — Shirley Temple on the screen in her newest Twentieth Century-Fox production, "Heidi," and on the stage, those incorrigible Yacht Club Boys of "Artists and Models" fame.

Heading the big supporting cast of "Heidi" are Arthur Treacher, Helen Westley, Jean Hersholt, Thomas Beck and Mary Nash.

Other outstanding new film productions soon to be released by Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox and Warner Bros. and listed for early showings at the Metropolitan include:

"Angel," an Ernst Lubitsch production starring the exotic Marlene Dietrich with Herbert Marshall and Melvyn Douglas; Errol Flynn and Joan Blondell, co-starred in "The Perfect Specimen" with Hugh Herbert, Edward Everett Horton, and Allen Jenkins; Eddie Cantor in "Ali Baba Goes To Town," a spectacular musical with June Lang, Tony Martin, Louise Hovick, Gypsy Rose Lee, and John Carradine; "Ebb Tide," a Paramount production in Technicolor featuring Ray Milland, Frances Farmer and Oscar Homolka; "It's Love I'm After," a Warner Bros. comedy with Bette Davis, Leslie Howard, and Olivia De Havilland, and the new Cecil B. DeMille production, "The Buccaneer."

Among the talented artists who have been signed for early personal appearances are stars gathered from practically every division of the entertainment world, including top-notch [illegible] of screen, radio and night club fame.

Heading the list is the celebrated Mae West, who will be making her first appearance on any Boston stage.

"100 Men and a Girl" has countless things to recommend it, notably the little Durbin, who achieves stardom in this, her second picture, and Leopold Stokowski, leading musical figure in America.

In support of these two celebrities are many players who have played in many of the screen's best hits—Alice Brady, Mischa Auer, Eugene Pallette, Adolphe Menjou.

Symphony Concert Delights With Prokofieff's Scores

By RUTH MARSTERS

Prokofieff and Richard Strauss are the two contemporary composers to whom Dr. Serge Koussevitzky has devoted the second program of the Boston Symphony season.

At yesterday afternoon's concert in Symphony Hall Prokofieff's "Lieutenant Kije," Orchestral Suite, Op. 60, and the same composer's Russian Overture, Op. 72, were given their first performance before a Boston audience.

The suite is taken from incidental music written for the film of the same name. The story is one which serves as fertile ground for Prokofieff's effervescent humor.

The picture is not known here, but according to program notes "Lieutenant Kije" is a character created by some courtiers expressly to avoid contradicting a Czar who has mistakenly assumed such a person to exist.

In the Suite the story is told with that nicety of detail and conciseness of style which place Prokofieff in the ascendency as a writer of program music.

But if there is a score that sparkles and delights the same can hardly be said of the "Russian Overture." It is hard indeed to understand such labored and forced efforts from this source.

The "Classical Symphony," with its lucidity, spontaneity, and wit, was not as well performed as it has been on previous occasions. The strings in particular lacked their usual precision and flexibility. It is of course early in the season, and therefore conceivable that the orchestra is not as yet in its best playing form.

The performances given the two Strauss works, "Death and Transfiguration" and "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks," left, on the other hand, little to be desired. They fairly glowed with vitality and the poetry which Dr. Koussevitzky's reading instilled into them.

The same program will be repeated at this evening's concert in Symphony Hall.

The program of the next regular pair of concerts on Friday afternoon and Saturday evening will include Mahler's Fifth Symphony and in addition Wagnerian excerpts will be performed with assisting soloists.

The shorter series of six pairs of concerts will open in Symphony Hall on Monday evening, October 25, and Tuesday afternoon, October 26.

Fetters on Defense

THE principle of naval limitation, which no other nation now observes, still hangs like a deadweight upon the Navy of the United States.

If we should now undertake the maximum of naval construction permitted by our own law, we would actually be limited to strength permitted by treaties WHICH DO NOT EXIST.

This strange situation arises from the fact that the Vinson-Trammel Act of 1934 bound us to the limits of a treaty then in force between the United States, Great Britain and Japan.

That treaty has expired. But the Vinson-Trammel Act is still in full effect.

The result is that England and Japan can strengthen their navies to the full extent of their capacity to build, and ARE SO BUILDING.

But the American Navy is still THROTTLED BY A DEAD TREATY.

Perhaps one reason we have not heard more about this outrageous fact is that we had not even ATTEMPTED to build up to treaty strength.

But we couldn't build beyond the obsolete treaty strength if we WANTED TO.

And it is our own law that ties our hands, not any agreement with other nations.

THE present international situation is going to spotlight the attention of the next Congress on the question of adequate national defenses.

Particularly is Congress going to be called upon to check up on our naval defense.

Certainly we should with all possible speed bring the American Navy up, not to any level of forgotten treaties, but to a level of absolute security against any possible foreign attack.

And the cutting of the self-imposed fetters that now cripple our FIRST LINE OF DEFENSE must be one of the first actions of Congress.

Proper Treatment Needed

FEDERAL investigators, visiting Boston, announce a determination to smash narcotic ring activities in New England. They should, and the police of every city and town ought to give them the necessary co-operation.

The traffic in the poison that destroys minds must be stopped. Prison is the only suitable place for the dope pedlar.

There is, however, another and serious phase of the drug problem—a phase too long ignored. It concerns the addicts and the need for providing adequate treatment.

In this connection the recommendations of Miss Ruth E. Collins, superintendent of the House of Detention for Women in New York City, are too startling to be ignored.

She tells us that New York has noted a 42 PER CENT INCREASE this year in the number of women narcotic users. She adds there is reason to believe the rate of increase prevails throughout the country.

Her suggestion is that farms for the treatment of female addicts be established in EVERY STATE. There is neither justice nor common sense, she says, in treating such women as criminals and sending them to prison.

That is the truth; we cannot rid ourselves of the dope menace so long as we seek only pedlars and ignore users. We must remove the demand as well as the supply.

The narcotics situation is a matter for the legislatures of all New England States. Our existing statutes must be improved. We cannot afford to sacrifice more of our people on the altar of official neglect.

There is no more reason why all responsibility for treatment of drug addicts should be Federal than that all action against narcotics traffic should be Federal.

Let Us Keep Our Mills

THE sale of the big Otis Mills in Ware interests all New England, none more than the plant's 600 employes who fear a jobless future.

Rumor has it the buildings will be abandoned, possibly demolished and the machinery moved to Southern mills. This would be a repetition of a situation that has meant loss and suffering for other industrial communities in this section.

The Otis Mills, consisting of six large buildings, a power plant and three big warehouses, were constructed at a cost of $3,000,000. But, according to press dispatches, the sale price was only $50,000.

Here indeed is material for deep thinking, for municipal officials especially. Industry cannot be regarded as the bottomless source of revenue supplying a ceaseless flow of cash for city and town expenditures.

This is a highly competitive era, nowhere more than in New England. We face not only the rivalry of Japan and other cheap labor nations, but also that of other sections of our own country.

Consequently, if we place too great a municipal burden on an industry, already hard pressed with national and international problems, we have only ourselves to thank if that industry, like the gold-egg goose, dies.

The current tax rate in Ware is $38 per thousand of valuation. That probably had something to do with the passing of the Otis Mills and the jobs.

Board Suspects Sabotage

THE possibility of sabotage in the damage to the machinery of the cruiser Vincennes at Boston Navy Yard a month ago has been admitted in Washington.

The Navy board of investigators reports that two reduction gears were damaged by a file and a small piece of metal, "probably by persons unknown."

These findings are now in the possession of the Navy Department, where officials ought to make every effort to learn the identity of the "persons unknown."

The $15,000,000 Vincennes was by no means the first American defense ship to suffer mysterious damage. There have been many others. So many, in fact, that the suspicion of a planned sabotage campaign has been strengthened in official circles.

But to merely suspect isn't enough. The American people have a right to know.

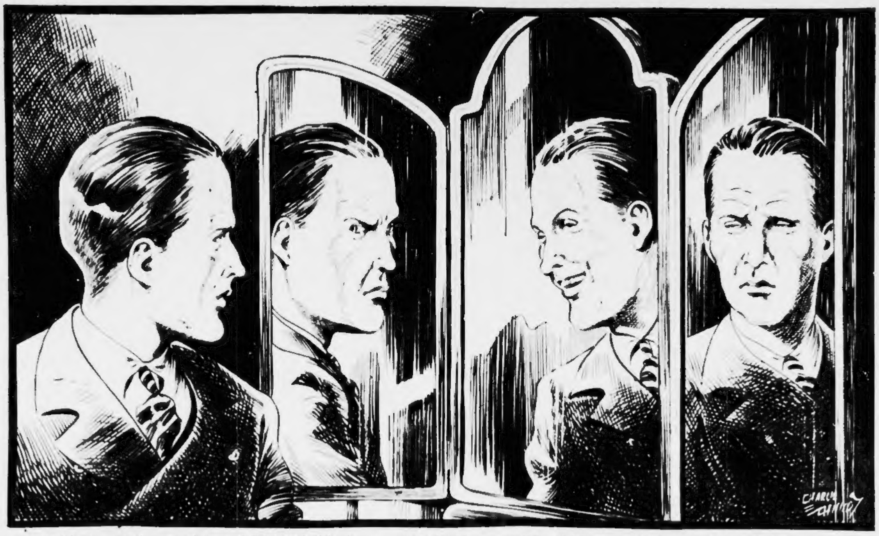
Sabotage, Russia's favorite excuse for a trip to the firing squad, cannot be tolerated in the United States.

The World Is a Mirror



BEST FRIEND AND BITTEREST FOE—IN THE GLASS THE YOUNG MAN MEETS BOTH

THERE is truth in the old overworked saying, "He was his own worst enemy," and Mr. Charles Schmidt, brilliant artist, depicts it.

The young man he shows gazing into the mirrors sees himself, or, more accurately, three reflections of himself. But images are are not all he sees. Before him, in the glass, is his BEST FRIEND or BITTEREST FOE.

Which depends on the young man; depends especially on the gray matter above and behind the forehead. He can laugh or growl or snarl and the world and mirrors will also laugh or growl or snarl.

It is the power within that makes or destroys a man, not the forces without.

Alfred Brady, the Indiana farm boy whom Federal agents killed this week in Bangor, Me., thought himself Public Enemy Number One. Nobody was ever more wrong. Brady was his OWN ENEMY. The hostility was wholly private.

Wrong, too, was the number. It might just as well have been a million as one. Certainly all humanity organized against him could not have done him the harm he did himself.

Brady was envious. That probably was his greatest fault. What others had he wanted. What others had he would have, even if the having meant murder.

So, like hundreds of other foolish men living and dead, he sacrificed friendship, opportunity and success, became an outlaw.

He thought he was doing something new and big. He lacked the intelligence to understand that his insatiable craving for other men's possessions was the lust of savagery.

Undoubtedly Brady, ignorant and illiterate, would have been surprised to learn that it was at such men as he that Moses aimed the strongest of his commandments, received from God direct and brought down from the mountain:

"THOU SHALT NOT COVET THY NEIGHBOR'S GOODS."

That commandment might have sounded old-fashioned to Brady. But Brady is dead. The commandment lives. And there is little doubt now about which was "old-fashioned."

Brady was a hater of men, of those more fortunate, of especially those who represented constituted authority. That made him furious and unreasoning.

Hate was in him what Balzac aptly defined as "the vice of narrow souls, fed with all their littleness and made the pretext of base tyrannies."

Hate was the cancer that consumed him mentally and left him morally dead years before he lay lifeless on the Bangor pavement.

It was not really Brady they lifted and carried away to an undertaker's morgue. It was the shell of a man eaten from within.

Brady was quick to anger. That was the inner force that turned him from a human being to a brutal savage.

Anger once made him kick out the teeth of a dying patrolman, lift his own lip and bare his long canine tooth. A wolf does that when ready to bite. Brady was at times less than a wolf.

The young man in the picture should shun the weaknesses that made Brady a criminal.

The young man should encourage the strength of will to laugh at himself and to criticise himself. The self in the middle mirror is the BEST FRIEND SELF.

The young man should look closely for traces of hate, envy and anger, then root them out of his mind. The selves in the left and right mirrors are the ENEMY SELVES. Break the hinges, throw them away. That's the thing to do.

For the world is indeed a silvered surface that adds not, detracts not, only reflects. It returns what it receives, seldom less, never more.

Human Side of the News -:- By Edwin C. Hill

I've been waiting for years to get something on Horatio Alger. Here it is, at last.

Here's a story of a man who opened a great career for himself and started a great historic human enterprise by watching the clock. Just give me time and I'll get the story of the man who won name and fame by not breaking up a job when the boss was looking. I'm sure he's somewhere in the world.

Edwin C. Hill

The tale of [illegible] Frank, the Clock Watcher, may now be added to the annals of Ragged Dick and Tattered Tom. He is Dr. Frank Conrad, assistant chief engineer of the Westinghouse Company, father of radio broadcasting, topping the bill for the seventeenth birthday of broadcasting at Pittsburgh, October 30th.

It was he who started KDKA, the pioneer station which broadcast the Harding landslide returns November 2, 1920.

The government borrowed him to devise the first airplane radio apparatus. He returned to Wilkinsburg steamed up with the idea of radio broadcasting, an ambition fired by watching a clock. Then came the Harding election broadcast. Dr. Conrad moved into wider fields of electrical experimentation, taking out more than 200 patents.

HE WON THE BET

In 1912, tinkering and scheming around the Westinghouse plant, he had a $12 watch. He bet that this watch would keep better time than the more expensive time-piece owned by a fellow engineer. Then he slipped a $65 set of works into the $12 case and let Nature take its course. The big Westinghouse Union clock set the official pace.

But Conrad wanted a double check. In his garage at nearby Wilkinsburg, he rigged a crude receiving set. Then he began to get time signals from the Arlington Naval Station. That gave him a constant check on how his entry was doing. He won his bet, and that was that, but he had stirred up an eager interest in radio.

In 1926, he received the Morris Liebmann award from the Institute of Radio Engineers; in 1928 the University of Pittsburgh made him an honorary Doctor of Science; in 1931 he was awarded the Edison medal of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers; in 1933 the John Scott medal of the city of Philadelphia, and in 1936 the Lamme medal of the A. I. E. E.—pretty good for a clock watcher.

He is a diligent student of biology, botany and astronomy, and a member of many engineering and scientific societies. When he was asked to promise his KDKA hosts that he surely would be at their party, he said, "Well, if you think I ought to. It won't take all day, will it?"

He has a lined, leathery face, with a loose flop of graying hair across his forehead, jutting black eyebrows and the look of a man who will watch anything important or interesting—even a clock.

* * *

The first working "telecasting" stage will be in the Grand Central Station, with the broadcast from the top of the Chrysler building. They must have height for television.

When radio first came out of Time's suspense file, Marconi was sure it would work only over a few miles on account of the curvature of the earth. Then they found that Providence had attended to this problem by encasing the earth in a hollow shell—the Heaviside surface, 60 miles up, bouncing the waves around the world.

IT'S ON THE WAY

The extremely short waves needed for television are not deflected by the Heaviside surface. Hence, so far, television is good for only 40 or 50 miles. But the technicians are working like beavers to solve this. They think they will win.

Another difficulty arises in the fact that special light requirements will make the studios so hot it will melt the permanent wave off a studio soubrette.

But at any rate, television is coming some day. It will pick up outdoor events, like football games, and will probably put on studio broadcasts as blind radio does now.

Wells is possibly right in "The Shape of Things to Come," when he preaches that we must keep on branching out—and that we are certainly doing.

I wish somebody would send me in a poem I heard years ago. The refrain runs, "God helps a man when the last of his dreams is dead."

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Lola's bored.

She wants so terribly to live an exciting life ... a life that will warm her all through—cure her restlessness and indifference—keep her interested and contented.

Elsie Robinson

But how can she live such a life when nothing ever turns out as she thought it would?

Somewhere there must be just the right man ... just the right work ... just the right place to fit her need. Won't I tell her how to find it?

Her main ambition is to marry. Not because she cares for domestic life. Anything but; she loathes it! The very idea of staying in the same place, doing the same old chores, drives her crazy.

But if she were married she'd "always have someone around to drive away the loneliness and cure the bewilderment" ... SOMEONE WHO WOULD KEEP HER FROM THINKING.

Yes, it's a real letter—from Rochester, N. Y. But it might as well have been written by anyone from anywhere in these United States. For it's the old, old story of THE SOUL THAT WON'T GROW UP.

Silly as they seem, you and I have made these same demands—expected Life to hand up ready-made solutions for our discontent, as a baby expects its mother to hand it a shiny ball.

THE REAL REASON

But always Life has disappointed us—and always will. Why?

BECAUSE HAPPINESS DOESN'T COME FROM WITHOUT US. WE MANUFACTURE IT WITHIN OURSELVES.

Outside things would satisfy us if we lived in outside things. BUT WE DON'T—WE LIVE WITHIN OURSELVES. A new man, a new job, a new party dress ... none of these things can give us "an interest in life." They are only "the makings" of joy or excitement.

IT'S UP TO US TO TAKE THESE MAKINGS AND OUT OF THEM CREATE DRAMA AND BEAUTY, PLEASURE AND CONTENTMENT.

Everywhere you can see this process going on. Five girls will go to the same job, earn the same wage, return to the same street at night. Four of those girls will be discontented, envious, restless, unhappy.

BUT, UNDER IDENTICAL CIRCUMSTANCES, THE FIFTH GIRL WILL ACHIEVE ADVENTURE AND DELIGHT.

I can't tell you how to be happy. Nor can you find contentment by "having someone always around."

In either case you're trying to dump your load on another's shoulders—and it can't be done, youngster.

Your life is your own job—and yours alone. And none of it will come easily. No one is born contented, or excited, or happy. If you want to be interested, you'll have to work for every throb and thrill.

And the minute you stop, the merry-go-round will also stop.

So you might as well stop envying other people and wishing you had their wonderful dispositions or lucky breaks. We make our dispositions—we build our opportunities.

That's That -:- -:- By Bruce Gustin

American Railroads should take pride in their safety record. During the first half of this year, they carried 246,997,594 passengers without killing a single one of them.

This performance is all the more remarkable because of the increased speed at which passenger trains are traveling. And the number of passengers carried in the first half of 1937 was 4.3 per cent greater than for the same period of 1936, when there were five fatalities.

The railroads of this country have demonstrated that safety campaigns can be made a success. They were the first of the major industries to put special emphasis upon a policy of "safety first." And instead of waging sporadic campaigns, they have made their safety drive a continuous business.

A survey by the American Municipal Association shows the total investment of only thirty-eight cities in municipal airports exceeds 54 million dollars and more than one and one-half million dollars are spent annually on their upkeep.

As few of these have ever been self-supporting and most municipalities now have more demands upon them than tax revenues will satisfy, how to enlarge their airports to accommodate larger ships is a question which is going to add to their financial worries.

Forty-passenger, 60,000-pound luxury liners such as are being talked of for transcontinental service in 1938, will need wide-paved runways 4000 or 5000 feet long. But few cities, even those which boast the biggest landing fields, have such runways.

Another attempt is being made in Pennsylvania to find a solution for the state's "bootleg" coal problem.

For several years, thousands of men and boys have been helping themselves to coal on company owned land and marketing it at cut prices.

Their theory is that the coal is there, they are entitled to a chance to earn a living and if coal companies won't operate their mines, then the miners will.

Government not only is the biggest business in the United states, but it is the fastest growing business.

In hard times and good times, it gets bigger and bigger, and the worse times are the faster it grows.

It has grown so great that nobody really understands how big it really is.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Oct. 16—Purely personal piffle: I never saw a newspaper woman act like Glenda Farrell plays her on the screen. Good old back country talk: I don't know which away he went. My first column efforts on a small daily were captioned 'What They Say.' Separated with dots ... like ... this!

O. O. McIntyre

I'm still ga-ga about Harriet Hoctor and Carole Lombard. First choice in masculine diction: Herbert Marshall. Major Bowes gets more repeat requests for the poem "The best things in life are free" than any other. Major Raymond [illegible] name for mystery novels: "Whodunit books."

A wasp once knocked me backwards out of a pony cart. It always tickled me that Ziegfeld could not carry a tune. The book that made me laugh loudest in my youth was "Three Men in a Boat," by Jerome K. Jerome. Recently I re-read it without a chuckle. Incidentally, how Jimmy Walker must be chuckling!

Art for art's sake: Those occasional readings by Mrs. Richard Mansfield for the true lovers of the theater. The most companionable Mark Twain fan I know is H. T. Webster, the cartoonist.

England's greatest showman, Charles B. Cochran, began his career with Huber's Dime Museum. I can get myself sick—and have—on watermelon rind pickles.

The most interesting sight in Vienna was the sidewalk cafe where the mustached Ferenc Molnar came at the precise hour each late afternoon to sip his demi-tasse brandy. Anyone handing a [illegible] to my form.

The keenest student of government I know believes that had Huey Long lived 10 years longer he would have been America's dictator. He believes John L. Lewis would head for the same post although lacking the cleverness of Long.

The only worth while dish I ever found in England was the meat pudding at the venerable Cheshire Cheese. For sedentary reading I'll take Julian Green.

Twilight happiness: Irving Cobb's mother's last year was spent sitting at a window watching the building of the fine hotel in Paducah that bears her son's name. Every so often I have to eat a meal at a restaurant—nothing else will satisfy. I blow hot and cold about Clark Gable in the big he-man roles.

The man who could aid others with the straightest face I ever saw was "Pop" Gibson, veteran art editor. Walter Catlett is a runner-up. I haven't heard any moderns on the radio put over a song better than Jack Norworth.

For many years I ended informal letters to both men and women with "Love and kisses" until a lawyer warned me I was playing with dynamite.

Billy Bryant, last of river showboat men, is one of my interesting correspondents. He ties up for the winter at Point Pleasant, about four miles from Gallipolis. Billy has a hearty philosophy and is bubbling with the sheer joy of living. He is owner of the showboat, head of the troupe, in fact the whole works, but doesn't mind sickling a path down the levee for customers, selling tickets, playing the calliope and even taking a relief turn in the pilot house.

A disciple of simple things, Billy likes to sit on the top deck at eventide and watch the sun go down, singing the old time songs as he floats along.

Shameful confession: I have a stack of more than a thousand letters that should have been answered long ago.

All one has to do to understand why such shows as The Follies, Vanities and Scandals died is to see an 85-cent production at Music Hall. That's the answer!

When a discussion of classical music comes up my wife can make me twist in my chair by mentioning casually that I was once a second mandolinist in a dance orchestra. And then begs me to play "Over the Waves" for the guests.

I'll drop anything I'm doing and go anywhere at any time to see a new Donald Duck film.

Second childhood item: Uncle Don's kiddie tales interest me. And any time they bring me food with a "whisper of garlic" I beam. In odd lot bond sales Peruvian 6's are known as "Odd McIntyres," for goodness sakes!

Honest Injun Note: Opie Read, I believe it was, used to tell of a friend who visited an anthropologist studying a group of Navajos. The second morning the scientist knocked at his guest's door and, finding it locked, observed: "Your valuables are safe. There are no white men within 10 miles of here."
